

Columbia University Press

THE THEATER in SOVIET RUSSIA

N. A. GORCHAKOV, in this half-century history of the Russian theater, in which he worked for many years as a director, traces the course of one of the most glorious phases of the world's theater. Its history since the imposition of the First Five Year Plan is studied in terms of the tensions between the critical pressures of Communist Party dictation and the individual tendencies of the workers in the theater. $10.00

LETTERS of a RUSSIAN TRAVELER

N. M. KARAMZIN. Translated and Abridged by Florence Jonas. In 1789-90, Karamzin, a young Russian aristocrat, toured Western Europe, observing society, the arts, and politics and meeting eminent personalities of the time. This is a record of his journey in letters purported to have been written to friends during his trip. Written with charm and wit, the full flavor of the original has been preserved in this first modern translation of a work that has long been inaccessible to English readers. $5.00

DOSTOYEVSKI in RUSSIAN LITERARY CRITICISM, 1846-1956

VLADIMIR SEDURO. Here is an analysis of critical writings on Dostoyevski from Belinski to the present Soviet men of letters—and of politics. The century and more since the novelist's first appearance has seen much shifting in critical approach and many brilliant interpretations by Russian critics. Mr. Seduro documents the fluctuations of official Soviet policy toward him and emphasizes the importance of Dostoyevski since 1956 when a new phase of treatment was begun. $7.50

SOVIET EDUCATION

Edited by GEORGE L. KLINE. With a Foreword by GEORGE S. COUNTS. Written by former Soviet teachers and students, the nine essays in this volume give factual accounts of Soviet education. They describe the pervasive influence of Soviet political doctrine in the classroom and in academic life. $3.50

2960 Broadway, New York 27, New York

HARVARD SLAVIC STUDIES

Volume III. Edited by HORACE G. LUNT. This volume includes a discussion of Marko Marulić by Mirko A. Usmiani; a study of the importance of the Russian Old Believers by Serge A. Zenkovsky; "The Russian Bible Society and the Bulgarians" by James F. Clarke; the first English translation of Petar Njegoš' philosophical epic poem, "The Ray of the Microcosm," by Anica Savić-Rebac; and an essay on the insect symbols in the work of Dostoevskij by Ralph E. Matlaw.

George S. N. Luckyj follows the thread of the Party line in Communist literature; Svatava Pírková-Jakobson traces the impact of America on Czechoslovakian youth in the period between the two wars; and Vera Sandomirsky provides a valuable exegesis of Soviet war and postwar lyrical poetry. $5.75

LENINISM

By ALFRED G. MEYER. Since Stalin's death there has been a renewed interest—both in Russia and in the world—in Lenin's teachings. Here, for the first time, is a book dedicated to a thorough and objective study of the aims of Lenin and the influence of his thought—his conception of the party and of the Russian revolution, the revolutionary state, the prospects for socialism inherent in the 20th century. $5.50

FACTORY AND MANAGER IN THE USSR

By JOSEPH S. BERLINER. How do Soviet factory managers overcome such obstacles as constantly high production targets, shortages of materials, and unrealistic orders from the bureaucrats in Moscow? What are the strengths and weaknesses of the existing system? Based on a series of personal interviews with former Soviet managers and on various Soviet publications, this book explores these questions in detail and gives an authentically "inside" view of the Soviet business world. An indispensable aid in evaluating the nature of any current or future changes in the Soviet economy. $7.50

TOTALITARIAN DICTATORSHIP AND AUTOCRACY

By CARL J. FRIEDRICH and ZBIGNIEW K. BRZEZINSKI. This valuable and timely book contends that totalitarian dictatorship is historically unique and that its fascist and communist forms are basically, although not wholly, alike. The authors show how totalitarian ideology develops and changes; the nature of propaganda and terror; why family and church groups are inherently more able to resist the "system"—and why, in spite of all, that system is not likely to be toppled by internal revolt. $5.50

Through your bookseller, or from

HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS

79 Garden Street, Cambridge 38, Massachusetts
