Due to a typographical error part of the paragraph beginning on page 332 was omitted. The remainder of the paragraph on page 332 following the word ecclesia should read as follows:

Rordorf mentions briefly the Roman titular churches, and he discusses the famous North African (Cirta) domus ecclesiae which was plundered on 19 May 303.³² Rordorf argues that the conditions of domūs ecclesiae varied from place to place, but he thinks that all shared certain common interior features which are those mentioned in the case of the church at Cirta: vessels, books, lamps, clothing, jars, and other vessels—none of these, it must be added, is an architectural feature. As for the orientation of rooms within the typical domus ecclesiae, Rordorf bases his observations on the evidence provided by Tertullian and Clement, namely that prayer was oriented to the east.³³ Rordorf finds archaeological confirmation of this theological-literary evidence in the Dura house church.³⁴

GOSPEL FICTIONS

by Randel Helms

A ccording to this provocative book, the four Gospels of the New Testament are fictional narratives, composed as the culmination of an extensive literary and oral tradition—idealistic writings produced to serve a theological vision. The most familiar and powerful of these fictions are analyzed as literature: the stories of Christ's birth, his agony in the Garden of Gethsemane, his betrayal by Judas, his crucifixion, death, and resurrection. Scholarly yet accessible, this book reveals the Gospels as works of literary art—contrived, creative interpretations of doctrine and literary precedent that have become the supreme fictions of our culture.

Randel Helms, a noted biblical scholar, is professor of English at Arizona State University.

"This book represents scholarship well communicated."
