JUSTICE IN THE BALKANS

Prosecuting War Crimes
in the Hague Tribunal

John Hagan

"With our attention shifted from ethnic cleansing to global terrorism, we have lost track of what is at stake in The Hague. With this penetrating analysis of the court's workings, Hagan forcefully yanks us back. . . . Hagan traces the complex interactions between investigatory and prosecutorial teams, the dynamics between witnesses and prosecution, and how the special leadership of three successive chief judges turned an unpromising start into a forceful finish. On the path from the Nuremberg trials to the 'liberal legalism' of the International Criminal Court, these proceedings, Hagan argues, stand as a milestone in the creation of humanitarian and international criminal law."—Robert Legvold, Foreign Affairs

RECONSIDERING ROOSEVELT ON RACE

How the Presidency Paved the Road to Brown

Kevin J. McMahon

"A fabulous study and a great story. Through his innovative examination of FDR's strategic decision to promote civil rights through a reconstructed federal judiciary, McMahon makes an original and important contribution to civil rights history and the determinants of constitutional change. Highly recommended."
