Private Life under Socialism

Love, Intimacy, and Family Change in a Chinese Village, 1949-1999

YUNXIANG YAN

"This may well prove to be the finest rural ethnography of a Chinese village ever written. By focusing on the emotional domain, Yan invites his readers to engage ethnographically in a new domain of scholarly exploration and analysis. In so doing, he has made the Chinese more human. It is a wonderful study."

—William Jankowiak,

University of Nevada, Las Vegas

"It takes years of sharing villagers' lives to see beneath the surface. Yan lived it, and he brings deep understanding to both the narrative and the analysis."

KAMIKAZE, CHERRY BLOSSOMS, AND NATIONALISMS

The Militarization of Aesthetics in Japanese History
EMIKO OHNUKI-TIERNEY

"This book is a cultural and historical rescue mission for the memory of the tokkōtai (kamikaze) pilots who died near the end of World War II. Far from the popular image of crazed ultra-nationalist zealots determined to die for the emperor, Ohnuki-Tierney describes a group of young men many of whom were well read in Western philosophy and literature, some of whom were Marxists or Christians, and few if any of whom believed they were in fact dying for the emperor. She helps us understand these complex young men by placing them in a broad cultural and historical context."—Robert N. Bellah, author of Tokugawa Religion

"An original, provocative, and important book. Ohnuki-Tierney's search for 'why they did it' in the diaries and letters of the pilots alone makes this worthwhile reading."—Tetsuo Najita, University of Chicago

The United States in the Asia-Pacific since 1945

Roger Buckley

In a fast-moving and incisive narrative, Roger Buckley traces the evolution of the Asia-Pacific region from the surrender of Japan in 1945 to the present day. He explores the policy of the United States through its relationship with the Soviet Union, China and, importantly, with Japan during occupation and beyond, from a geopolitical and military point of view.

Banking in Modern China

Entrepreneurs, Professional Managers and the Development of Chinese Banks, 1897-1937

Linsun Cheng

This book documents the evolution of modern Chinese banking, from the establishment in 1897 of the first Chinese bank (along a Western model), to the abrupt interruption in 1937 of professional banking by the Japanese invasion. Drawing from original documents of major Chinese banks, Linsun Cheng explains how the banks were able to grow into viable and self-sustaining institutions in China, despite a succession of foreign and domestic crises.

A European Perspective

Richard Louis Edmonds and Kam Louie, Editors

Considering the development of Chinese-European relations since China embarked on its open policy, these papers suggest that political relations have not significantly modified Europe's relations with China. They imply that Europe and China tend to view their relations with each other in terms of their relationships with the U.S.

Family and Social Policy in Japan

Anthropological Approaches

Roger Goodman, Editor

This book examines the relationship between the state and the individual in a number of unexplored areas in Japanese society, including policies relating to fertility, perinatal care, child care, sexuality and elder care. It concludes that a major transformation occurred during the 1990s as a result of Japan's changing economy, demography and civil society. The volume challenges many Western preconceptions about Japanese society.

Forager-Traders in South and Southeast Asia

Long Term Histories

Kathleen D. Morrison and Laura L. Junker, Editors

Specialized forager-traders have lived alongside and in exchange relationships with agriculturalists for many thousands of years in South and Southeast Asia. Here is a series of representative case-studies that pertain to a current archaeological debate. The issue concerns the extent to which historical foraging populations are to be understood as specialized adaptations to a complex economically diverse environment, rather than as throw-backs to a Paleolithic way of life.

The Sino-Japanese War of 1894-1895

Perceptions, Power and Primacy

S.C.M. Paine

This book examines the Sino-Japanese War of 1894-5, a significant event in world history. Japan so rapidly defeated China that citizens of Europe suddenly perceived Japan, not only as the dominant power of Asia, but also as a key international player. Western disgust with Chinese military performance led to their rapidly growing intrusions on Chinese sovereignty while Japan soon became an ally of the ruling superpower, Great Britain. To the present day, China is still struggling to reverse the judgment of this war and restore its regional dominance.

Fellowship Opportunities for 2003-2004

The Johns Hopkins University and Nanjing University announce fellowship competitions for in-residence research at the Institute for International Research at the Hopkins-Nanjing Center in Nanjing, China for the academic year 2003-2004. The fellowships will include a financial award that covers some combination of salary support, living expenses, travel, and general research support. Resident at the Hopkins-Nanjing Center, visiting fellows will be able to utilize and draw upon its academic resources including its excellent library and research assistance.

Purpose: Taking advantage of Nanjing's dynamic regional location, world-class historical archives, and the sixteen-year-old Hopkins-Nanjing Center, the institute's purpose is to further research and collaboration among international and Chinese scholars that promotes a broad research agenda using diverse methodologies.

Examples of the kinds of research projects that may be undertaken in academic year 2003-2004 include but are not limited to: international relations and U.S.-China relations, modern Chinese history, judicial reform and the rule of law, the evolution of governing and administrative institutions, the impact of economic reforms, public health and the environment, the development of non-governmental organizations, and multicultural studies in the U.S. and China.

Eligibility: The competition is open to professors, associate professors and assistant professors, as well as established scholars holding non-faculty appointments. Individuals completing their post-doctoral training are also eligible for appointment as junior fellows. Applicants must hold a Ph.D. or the terminal degree in their field.

For complete information and application instructions, see website www.nanjing.jhu.edu or contact Daniel B. Wright, Executive Director, Hopkins-Nanjing Center Washington Program Office. E-mail: wright@jhu.edu; telephone: 202/663-5801.

Forum on Religion and Ecology

Can the world's religious traditions address contemporary environmental issues?

The Forum on Religion and Ecology is providing the first systematic effort to explore this question from the perspective of ten of the world's most pervasive religious traditions. Engaging scholars in the disciplines of religion, science, economics, ethics, education, and public policy, this innovative research is helping us to understand some of the most complicated social and environmental problems of our time.

This important research has been published by the Harvard Divinity School Center for the Study of World Religions book series, "Religions of the World and Ecology" (distributed by Harvard University Press). Additional research information is available on the Forum on Religion and Ecology website.

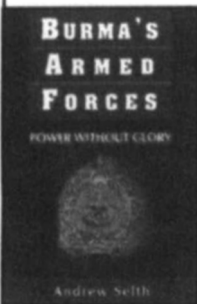

To find out more about how this vital research is helping to revision future human-earth relations, visit the Forum on Religion and Ecology website.
