Encounter

ENCOUNTER, edited in London by Stephen Spender and Melvin J. Lasky, is the most widely read and talked-about monthly of its type in the world. One of America's leading columnists, Joseph Alsop, considers that "anyone who wants to follow the mysterious movement of ideas in the modern world is forced to read ENCOUNTER."

ENCOUNTER has published in 1960 contributions by the following writers: Arthur Koestler, Isaiah Berlin, Herbert Lüthy, R.H.S. Crossman, C.A.R. Crosland, Marcus Cunliffe, William Golding, Boris Pasternak, Mark Abrams, F.R. Allemann, Raymond Aron, D.W. Brogan, Alastair Buchan, Richard Hoggart, Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., and H.R. Trevor-Roper. There have been articles on the Future of the Left, on Brecht, on Ghana, on the Uses of Television, on de Gaulle, on Mao Tse-tung, on Israel, on Yoga and Zen, on Film Censorship, on Popular Culture. Such articles, as well as those of a more literary nature, give ENCOUNTER an extraordinary breadth of appeal. Particularly noteworthy in 1960 was ENCOUNTER's scoop of two stories by Russian writers—Abram Tertz's The Trial Begins and Vladimir Dudintsev's New Year's Fable.

ENCOUNTER is in such demand nowadays that issues are liable to sell out soon after publication. To avoid disappointment, please place a regular order. The subscription rate is 45s. (U.S.A. $7.50, India Rs.12) a year, including postage, payable to your newsagent or to ENCOUNTER, 25 Haymarket, London, S.W.1.
