

"Rhodesians Never Die"
The Impact of War and Political Change
on White Rhodesia, c.1970-1980

PETER GODWIN and IAN HANCOCK

"A fascinating and learned analysis."—The Financial Times. Telling the story of how White Rhodesians reacted to the "terrorist" war and the onset of black rule in the 1970s, this study shows how internal divisions undermined the supposed unity of White Rhodesia, and how the self-appointed defenders of Western civilization sometimes adopted uncivilized methods of protecting the "Rhodesian way of life."

Male Homosexuality in South Africa

Identity Formation, Culture and Crisis

GORDON ISSACS and
BRIAN McKENDRICK

Describing the identity formation and culture of the male homosexual in South Africa, this study addresses such topics as the gay sub-culture, AIDS, implications for helping professionals, the crisis about "coming out," and the formal gay movement.

Marriage, Perversion, and Power
The Construction of Moral Discourse in Southern Rhodesia, 1894-1930

DIANA JEATER

This scholarly study examines the African marriage relationship and the regulation of sexuality in terms of both the political and the production systems, and offers valuable insights into the nature of gender relationships before and during the colonial period.

The Internationalization of Colonialism

Britain, France, and Black Africa,
1939-1956

JOHN KENT

This detailed analysis of British and French policy in their West African colonies during World War II and its aftermath shows how the broader requirements of Anglo-French relations in Europe and the wider world shaped the formulation and execution of the two colonial powers' policy in Black Africa.

Politics in the Portuguese
Empire

The State, Industry, and Cotton, 1926-1974

M. ANNE PITCHER

This book examines the complex relationship between the Portuguese authoritarian regime, the domestic textile industry, and colonial cotton production in Angola and Mozambique. Pitcher argues that conflicting interests and contradictory policies had unintentional, even debilitating, effects on many participants in the system.

Mombasa, the Swahili, and the Making of the Mijikenda

JUSTIN WILLIS

This is a radical reinterpretation of the history of the Kenyan city of Mombasa from the mid-nineteenth century to the height of colonial rule in the 1930s. Willis examines the institutions and social networks which simultaneously united and divided the people of the region before the colonial period, demonstrating both their interdependence and the creation of distinct population categories.

Re-Entry Grants for African Scholars Pursuing Education Research

This grants program is designed to assist in the professional re-establishment of talented African scholars who are returning from doctoral or post-doctoral studies abroad and wish to pursue research related to the revitalization and development of education in sub-Saharan Africa. All proposed projects must include an explicit and substantial focus on female school participation as part of the set of issues to be examined.

The proposed budget, not to exceed $25,000, may request funding for items such as a micro-computer and software, books, office supplies, living expenses, personnel assistance and local transportation. The budget may also include subsistence for one research team member of any nationality and a stipend to cover up to six months' transition costs for the principal researcher.

Applicants may submit research proposals prior to or within one year of returning to their Africa-based institutions. The proposal must be endorsed by the African institution where the applicant will be a full-time staff member. Also required are: two letters of recommendation from academic supervisors at the institution where the candidate carried out doctoral or post-doctoral study; doctoral transcripts; and resumes for the applicant and any professional research team member for whom funds are sought.

There are no deadlines for submission of proposals. For a full description of the program, write to:

Literacy, Culture and Development

Becoming Literate in Morocco

Daniel A. Wagner

Focusing on Moroccan children whose parents are unschooled, and whose language differs from that used in the classroom, this text addresses the importance of "mother-tongue" literacy programs, the notion of literacy "relapse," and the concept of educational poverty.

The Politics of Africa's Economic Recovery

Richard Sandbrook

Arguing that a more self-reliant, state-directed approach be adopted to ensure prosperity and democracy, this study assesses new political programs for reinforcing Africa's economic recovery because the major political powers are no longer constrained to support African authoritarianism.

Warriors at Work

How Guinea Was Set Free

by Mustafah Dhada

- Warriors at Work is Mustafah Dhada's compelling story of Guinea's struggle to gain its freedom from Portuguese rule. The man who instigated the nationalist movement that brought about Guinea's freedom was Amílcar Lopes Cabral, a Cape Verdian agronomist fully committed to armed struggle, to nationalist unity in Luso-Africa, and to the independence of Guinea and the Cape Verde islands. To liberate these two territories, Cabral helped found the African Party for the Independence of Guinea and the Cape Verde islands, PAIGC. The nationalist war was then launched, a nationalist army formed, and a protracted publicity drive mounted.
- How was Guinea set free? Was the PAIGC the only nationalist movement to emerge in Guinea? Was the mobilization drive and subsequent nationalist war a straightforward march to victory with the PAIGC calling the shots? And, was the campaign for statehood instigated solely to forge a new social order? Warriors at Work tackles these questions.
- Dhada's book is more than an exercise in methodical scholarship. It cuts through revolutionary rhetoric to reveal the remarkable struggle fought at the front lines and beyond. It is a factual, exciting, and precise account of a military and political contest. Cabralists, Africanists, war historians, and anyone looking for a moving human-interest story will find this book truly interesting.
- Mustafah Dhada is associate professor of political science at the University of Northern Colorado. He has written extensively on war and peace, the Muslim world, the Middle East, and political and semiotic heraldry.
