ANNOUNCING A MAJOR NEW BOOK OF INTEREST TO
ALL CONCERNED WITH HELLENIC STUDIES

Library of Numismatics, General Editor: PHILIP GRIERSON

ARCHAIC AND CLASSICAL GREEK

COINS

COLIN M KRAAY

This is the first comprehensive survey of Greek coinage to be published for over forty years, during which time great advances have been made in numismatic research and many long-accepted views have been questioned or overturned.

Dr Kraay describes the development of Greek coinage from its beginning in the seventh century BC until its character was decisively changed by the kingdoms which arose out of the empire of Alexander the Great at the end of the fourth century. He gives separate and parallel historical treatment to the coinage of each geographical area, and in a number of general chapters he unites these themes into a picture of the western world, the form of which conditioned that of all later coinages. Wherever possible he integrates the story of coinage in each state into its political history, indeed, the coinage itself illustrates and amplifies that history.

Contents Preface; List of abbreviations; Introduction; Coins and minting; Asia Minor to the Ionian revolt; Aegina, the Aegean islands and Crete; Athens; Corinth and Euboea; The Peloponnese; Central Greece; Macedonia and Thrace; Magna Graecia; Sicily; Western Asia Minor: the fifth and fourth centuries; The Persian empire; Coins in the Greek world; Appendices; Index of mints; Index of personal names; General index: Maps; List of plates: Plates.

Eleven hundred coins are illustrated in 64 pages of collotype plates.

The Author is Keeper of the Heberden Coin Room in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford, a lecturer in Greek numismatics in the University of Oxford, and a Fellow of Wolfson College.

A History of Greek Art

MARTIN ROBERTSON

A new and large-scale illustrated history of Greek art from the archaic to the hellenistic period: the development, maturity and decline of one of the richest and most inventive artistic cultures, lying at the root of the European tradition.

'This is a sane and sensitive study, which gives the mature opinions of a thoughtful and cultured scholar. Those who already have some knowledge of Greek sculpture and painting will find here much that is illuminating or provocative.'

History of Classical Scholarship from 1300 to 1850

Rudolf Pfeiffer

---

The first volume of History of Classical Scholarship described the laying of the foundations by Greek poets and scholars in the last three centuries B.C. Taking up the story with the revival of classical studies inspired by Petrarch 1300 years later, Professor Pfeiffer now describes the achievements of the Italian humanists and the independent movement in Holland that culminated in Erasmus and the German scholar-reformers, and traces the development of classical scholarship in Western Europe through the next 300 years. £7.50

Epigrammata Graeca

Edited by Sir Denys Page

---

This book includes all epigrams ascribed to Greek authors from Archilochus to Meleager, and in addition the two best of the epigrammatists from the following period, Philodemus and Crinagoras. The majority of the epigrams come from the Palatinate and Planudean manuscripts of the Greek Anthology, which have been recollated for the apparatus criticus. £5 Oxford Classical Texts

Athenian White Lekythoi

Patterns and Painters

---

Donna Carol Kurtz

---

White lekythoi are containers for oil, made of clay and decorated on a specially prepared white surface. Most of the scenes are drawn from the lives of Athenians of the fifth century B.C. and as visual records of contemporary life and customs they are unparalleled in Greek art. This book is primarily a study of the painters of these vases and their characteristic patterns, from the later sixth century to about 300 B.C. Illustrated £35 Oxford Monographs on Classical Archaeology

---

A History of the Ancient World

---

Chester G. Starr

---

This is a comprehensive and readable survey of history from the beginnings of man to the fifth century after Christ. The author presents a living story of the great stream of development from the Near East through Greece and Rome, and of its links with Indian and Chinese civilization. Second edition illustrated £6

The Stage of Aristophanes

C. W. DEARDEN

A new approach to the problem of the physical form of fifth-century Athenian theatre, aiming to show the kind of theatre which Aristophanes' plays seem to imply and the extent to which this is compatible with the archaeological and other evidence.

'An interesting and well-researched guide . . . highly recommended for all students of drama.'—Choice, American Library Association
University of London Classical Studies, No. 7 £7.00

The Aratus ascribed to Germanicus Caesar

edited by D. B. GAIN

A much-needed new text of this Latin version of Aratus' Phaenomena. Dr Gain gives the first English translation and a fully annotated text which incorporates Housman's many brilliant conjectures, and challenges both the modern view of the poem's authorship and its usual title of Aratea.

University of London Classical Studies, No. 8 £9.00

Flavius Cresconius Corippus: In laudem Iustini Augusti minoris

edited by AVERIL CAMERON

Corippus' panegyric on Justin II is of unique literary and linguistic interest as a major Latin poem produced in the Greek world of sixth-century Constantinople. Dr Cameron provides a new critical text with the first English translation and an historical commentary which gives special attention to the historical and iconographic importance of the work.

Illustrated £12.95

Early Virgil

WILLIAM BERG

'A bold and interesting work. The result is by no means a synthesis of orthodox opinion; the study is animated by many new insights into the general literary milieu of Greek and Roman pastoral.'
—Phoenix £5.50

Parabasis and Animal Choruses

G. M. SIFAKIS

' . . . welcomed for its sound scholarship, full analysis of all the forms and themes of the comic parabasis, and excellent discussion and pictures of comic choruses on vases.'

GENERAL EDITOR: H. H. SCULLARD Professor Emeritus of Ancient History, University of London

Festivals of the Athenians

H. W. PARKE

Professor Parke describes the chief ceremonial occasions of ancient Athens in their order in the calendar, and to offer the reader a general picture of the religious year as it presented itself to the Athenian citizen. By the term 'festivals' he means us to understand those days set aside by the Athenian state for the worship of deities; for there were no secular festivals as such, all holidays being dedicated to particular gods and goddesses. The book is divided into two parts, the first and longest of which deals in turn with each of the twelve festivals in the Athenian calendar, the second with other festivals unplaced in the calendar, or local.

With 77 illustrations ISBN 0 500 40033 4 £9.50

Philip II and Macedonian Imperialism

J. R. ELLIS

Dr Ellis's well-argued account puts a new complexion on Macedonian political and military strategy under Philip II. He treats in detail the changing relationship between Philip and the Athenians and establishes a Macedonian-based viewpoint for the complex dealings of the two states, for which documentation survives almost exclusively from the Athenian viewpoint alone. The argument he puts forward and develops is that Macedonian imperialism (of which the conquests of Philip's son Alexander the Great are the most spectacular demonstration) was not the product of one man's motivations but arose out of internal socio-military pressures, to which the king too was subject. With 77 illustrations ISBN 0 500 40028 8 £9.50

Tiberius the Politician

BARBARA LEVICK

The reputation of Tiberius Caesar has risen and fallen with bewildering rapidity, from the popular expressions of exultant hatred that greeted his death to the rehabilitations of recent times. The age of change that he inhabited, of the shift from Republic to Empire, made him exceptionally a product of his circumstances. Temperament, tastes, and the consciousness of an ancestry already crucial in Roman history for half a millennium, inclined Tiberius to Republicanism and to the political practices of the older Roman tradition. From his place within the dynasty of Augustus, however, he received the supreme power of an autocrat. The conflict of these two influences dominated a life in which politics – rather than personal psychology – had an overmastering influence, often of life or death, on the closest personal relations. It expressed itself in Tiberius' dealings with both nobility and plebeians, and in his paradoxical attempted forcing of the Senate towards greater freedom of initiative. The consequences are traced simultaneously with those of the vendetta pursued against Tiberius for three decades by less successful members of the imperial household, such as Augustus' divorced wife Scribonia and her descendants; for far from being brought to power as a last resort, Tiberius already knew at thirty years of age that he was destined to rule. The catastrophic consequences for members of the factious Augustan family and for lesser politicians of Tiberius' failure to end this feud are examined in terms of the treason trials that in an age of generally ordered calm came to terrorize the ruling inner circle.

In the light of recent research Dr Levick newly evaluates Tiberius' provincial policy; and assesses from evidence including political catchwords of the time how he himself wished his political career to be seen. With 77 illustrations ISBN 0 500 40029 6 £9.50

Dumbarton Oaks Bibliographies based on Byzantinische Zeitschrift

Series I: Literature on Byzantine Art 1892-1967

Edited by Jelisaveta Stanojevich Allen, Bibliographer, Dumbarton Oaks Center for Byzantine Studies

The semi-annual periodical Byzantinische Zeitschrift has devoted more than 200 pages each year to a critical bibliography prepared by leading scholars from many countries. The value to Byzantine scholars of these listings in themselves is inestimable, but with the cumulative indexing begun more than thirty years ago by the late Professor R. P. Blake of Harvard University, the value is surely even greater. In 1942 the enterprise was transferred to Dumbarton Oaks, where the bibliography has since been cumulated, classified, expanded and kept up-to-date. Now the first part of this project is available in book form as described below, while further series are planned for other subject categories.

Literature on Byzantine Art, Vol. 1, By Location

The present volume provides a cumulative classification of art historical literature based on entries in Volumes 1-60 of the periodical. Nearly 20,000 entries are topographically arranged by continent, country, region and site. The listings for each country contain further subdivisions by form, such as architecture, mosaics, paintings and sculpture. There are indices for authors and names of places.

Volume 1 is published in two separately bound parts, which are sold only as a set.

'A new bibliographic tool of extraordinary value. . . make instantly accessible the basic bibliography for the art and archeology of every site significant for Byzantine culture, broadly defined. Whether you want a detailed illustrated description of a specific church or a general topographic treatment of a city or region you can expect to be guided to the best available literature in both periodicals and monographs.'

1973 28.5 x 22.5 cm Total 1,095 pp. Cloth
ISBN 0 7201 0217 0 £24.00 the set of two parts

Literature on Byzantine Art, Vol. 2, By Categories

The companion bibliography to Volume 1 offers a cumulative classification of literature on the history of Byzantine art in general and according to media. Some 10,000 entries appear under a variety of main sections, which include bibliographies and literary sources, general works, architecture, sculpture, painting, illuminated manuscripts, iconography, and museums, collections, exhibitions. Each main section is further subdivided. General and author indices facilitate access to the main body of the work.
