THE AMERICAN POLITICAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION

PERSONNEL SERVICE

The American Political Science Association's Personnel Service operates as a clearinghouse, bringing together political scientists seeking positions and prospective employers. Registration in the service is open to members of the Association and to Political Science Departments. Membership in the Service, which includes a subscription to the monthly Newsletter, is $6.00 per year. Membership in the Credential Referral Service of the Personnel Service is an additional $8.00.

NEWSLETTER

A Newsletter, listing openings for political scientists including teaching, administrative and research openings, is mailed monthly to all Personnel Service members. Positions are listed by institution with a brief description of each opening.

CREDENTIAL REFERRAL SERVICE

A file will be maintained at the Association office for all members of the Credential Referral Service. This file will include a résumé, a dissertation abstract and/or a list of publications, and up to three letters of reference for each member. Referrals are made upon the request of a member or of an institution.

EMPLOYERS USING THE SERVICE

The Association's Council has adopted a policy that it is a professional obligation of all political science departments to list publicly all vacancies in the APSA Personnel Service Newsletter for which they are recruiting except those vacancies at the association and full professor levels which departments expect to fill from among people known to them. There is no cost to the institution listing its vacancies with the Service. Forms for listing openings in the Newsletter are available from the Personnel Service.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS: STRATEGIES OF AMERICAN ELECTORAL POLITICS, Third Edition

Nelson W. Polsby and Aaron B. Wildavsky,
University of California, Berkeley

From advance reviews of the Third Edition

"Presidential Elections strikes me as an unusually sophisticated, fair-minded and readable study that treats with discernment and objectivity the theory and practice of party politics and presidential strategy." James MacGregor Burns, Williams College

"This standard work is, of course, comprehensively informed, judicious and wise. Hence it is indispensable. Happily for an indispensable volume, it is also lucid and witty." Alexander M. Bickel, Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences

"... a comprehensive and thought-provoking study of this nation's presidential political process. The research involved appears to be thorough and objective. I was especially interested in the treatment given the Electoral College and the various proposals to reform it for I believe this subject has been the target of much emotionalism and too little rational analysis in recent years."

The Honorable Robert Dole, Chairman, Republican National Committee

"The campaign for President in 1972 is bound to be one of the liveliest and most exciting in American history. A careful reading of Presidential Elections will help both professionals and laymen understand a little more clearly what is going on. I enthusiastically recommend it."

Lawrence F. O'Brien, Chairman, Democratic National Committee

"This is a first-rate third edition of a first-rate book on how, why, and who America elects to the White House. It has been brought up to date for use in the 1972 election period, and wide use is just what it should have."

Richard M. Scammon, Director, Elections Research Center

"An excellent job. The Third Edition confirms the reputation of Presidential Elections as the best single guide for making sense of our quadrennial struggles for the grand prize of American politics, the Presidency." Douglas Price, Harvard University

"A very good revision of a very good book. Polsby and Wildavsky have provided an analysis of the American electoral process that will help both students and laymen to understand any modern American election." Howard Penniman, Georgetown University

THE PRESIDENCY

Dale Vinyard, Wayne State University

The presidency as an institution and the occupants of that office have come under heavy attack and criticism in recent years. One current book is even ominously entitled The Twilight of the Presidency. While such criticism is not entirely new, what is new is its amount, duration, and volume. The purpose of this book is to provide an introduction to the American presidency, an understanding of the functions of the office and its relation to other participants in the policy-making process. From such an understanding should come thoughtful and searching examinations of our institutions and their viability in the modern world. The Notes for each chapter and the Bibliography at the end of the book enhance the value to the student attempting to evaluate some of the criticisms and proposed reforms.

CONGRESS

Dale Vinyard, Wayne State University

Not intended to be an exhaustive study of the American Congress, this book provides a general introduction to the dynamics of Congress and its function in our political system.

"This work is neither a textbook nor a treatise. It does not profess to be exhaustive but it could stimulate deeper and wider exploration. With a succinctness and expertness not always found in more comprehensive or critical treatments it offers something of genuine value to everyone concerned—a better understanding of Congress." The Sunday Star (Washington, D.C.)

"In a series of illuminating essays, he discusses the functions of Congress, the rigors of getting elected and re-elected, the importance of Party-affiliation, the influence of committees, the procedures by which decisions are arrived at, the demands on the individual Senator and Representative. Dr. Vinyard has also included a chapter on some of the many Congressional reforms that have been proposed. He has used remarkable restraint in presenting his subject, discussing the problems of Congress objectively." WHEN-TV (Syracuse)

GROUP POLITICS: A NEW EMPHASIS

Edward S. Malecki, Jr., California State College, Los Angeles
H. R. Mahood, Memphis State University

This volume of readings, now in preparation, takes into account critical developments in the area of group politics and integrates selections reflecting these developments into a comparative framework. Through the comparative perspective students can come to understand the variations in group politics which are associated with variations in the social setting in which group politics take place. This relationship is viewed in three basic ways: one, cross-sectional comparison between societies; two, cross-sectional comparison within societies; and three, longitudinal comparison within societies. These three viewpoints, as emphasized in this book, respond to criticisms that the field of group politics has a one dimensional focus.

Sixteen selections are divided into four parts having the following titles: Part One: "Social Structure and Group Politics," Part Two: "Politics Within Groups," Part Three: "Group Impact on Governmental Policy," and Part Four: "Theoretical Implications on Trends of Future Studies in Group Politics."

URBAN POLITICS IN AMERICA

John H. Baker, Southern Illinois University

The government and politics of urban areas are complex phenomena which are not amenable to the simple, straightforward approach that both students and teachers of the subject would prefer. The basic contention of this book is that the study of urban politics must be both interdisciplinary and intergovernmental. The author draws materials from urban sociology, urban economics, and urban geography, and integrates them with material on urban politics.

Seventeen chapters are divided into four parts: Part I focuses on the interdisciplinary study of the urban processes and their relationship to political questions; Part II presents a general picture of how urban systems operate; Part III deals with the six most critical functional areas in our cities; and Part IV looks to the future of our cities. There is great use of contemporary empirical findings.

"Professor John Baker refuses to give up on the cities. He recognizes their problems, and the problems of those who govern cities and who live and work in them. But he dislikes the prevalent attitude of negativism. For most Americans, he insists, cities have not meant squalor and poverty, but a source of growth and enrichment. . . . His own solution is not based on copping-out. . . . Professor Baker sees the Federal Government as the rescue team . . ."

The Philadelphia Enquirer

"Carbondale may be thousands of miles from Harlem and El Barrio but Professor Baker is thoroughly versed — and staggeringly well read, as his copious bibliographies at the end of every chapter illustrate — in all our urban conflicts and ills."

URBAN POLITICS AND PROBLEMS, A Reader

H. R. Mahood, Memphis State University

Edward L. Angus, Rutgers University

While it is currently in vogue to write about urban America, and numerous new pages of print appear each day, several criteria guided the editors in compiling this volume. Foremost, the book takes a pragmatic approach to the study of urban politics and administration, stressing the processes, rather than the techniques, of decision-making at various levels of problem identification and policymaking. AMERICAN POLITICAL THOUGHT

The Philosophic Dimension of American Statesmanship

Morton J. Frisch, Northern Illinois University

Richard G. Stevens, The University of Waterloo

The editors of this symposium differ from a great many students of American politics who hold the view that statesmen are altogether thoughtless, that they are moved solely by forces, impulses or interests or that they are merely clever "operators" — alternately the sheep and goats of the group theory of politics or the lions and foxes of Machiavelli. They believe that American statesmen have had more or less consistent views of the good of the country and that their actions have been constantly informed by these views (that is, that their views have been crucial moving forces in American life). They further believe that political life in America has been punctuated by three great crises, and that the statesmen having political responsibility at these critical moments in American history, in facing up to the problems those crises presented, have come nearer a philosophic treatment of the problems of liberal democracy than have any other Americans.

The crises referred to are the Founding, the House Divided, and the Great Depression. The ten essays are "Thomas Jefferson" by Harvey C. Mansfield, Jr.; "The Federalist" by Martin Diamond; "John Marshall" by Robert K. Faulkner; "John C. Calhoun" by Ralph Lerner; "Abraham Lincoln" by Harry V. Jaffa; "Frederick Douglass" by Herbert J. Storing; "Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr." by Walter Berns; "Woodrow Wilson" by Harry Clor; "Franklin Delano Roosevelt" by Morton J. Frisch; and "Felix Frankfurter" by Richard G. Stevens.

"All of the writers have things to say that shock and sting a reader's mind to greater awareness of what human beings face in striving to reconcile liberty and justice, anarchy and order, common sense and high statesmanship, the changing relationships between leaders and followers." America

THE AMERICAN POLITICAL SYSTEM INTRODUCTORY READINGS

George S. Masannat and Vernon Martin,
Western Kentucky University

Fifty-five readings for the introductory course in American Government.
The eleven topics considered are:

The Political Culture
Political Participation and Alienation
Civil Rights and Liberties
The Politics of Violence: The Challenge to the Status Quo
The Politics of Ecology
Political Dynamics: Public Opinion, Pressure Groups and Political Parties
The Electoral Process
The Congress
The Presidency
The Judiciary
United States Foreign Policy

Each part opens with an introduction that supplies the political and analytical context for the readings and identifies their salient aspects. The selected bibliography and the study questions at the end of each part are intended to provoke further reading, class questions and discussions.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

THE DISCIPLINE AND ITS DIMENSIONS

Stephen L. Wasby, Southern Illinois University

The true value of this volume will become most clear to the student when he ventures on to more specialized courses. It was written because the author believes (1) that the study of politics does have "clear title" to a definite position as an acknowledged field of learning, and (2) that a knowledge of what is happening in the discipline will provide the student with a better basis for the study of specific substantive areas of politics. The author's purpose is to provide undergraduate students of political science with an examination of the discipline he is studying, its history, organization, and current issues, as well as scope.

Sixteen chapters are divided into three major parts. In the first the author provides some basic definitions of the field of political science and of politics. In the second part, political science as an institutionalized discipline is examined in terms of its history and relations with the social sciences. The third part of the volume is an exposition, area by area of the scope and developments in the fields within political science.

Material written by other political scientists has been incorporated into the book in two ways. Several subfields are discussed by experts in those fields. In addition, several items have been reprinted from other sources, and two papers are published for the first time.

"... an Introduction to Political Science which is different, imaginative and sophisticated, yet constructed in such a way that a student unlearned in the discipline is deftly brought quickly to a high level of understanding in a way which he or she will see as interesting and relevant."

CONTEMPORARY POLITICAL SYSTEMS: AN INTRODUCTION TO GOVERNMENT

George S. Masannat, Western Kentucky University

Gilbert Abcarian, The Florida State University

In contrast to the many extant texts emphasizing historical, institutional, and predominantly American dimensions of politics, the stress in this volume is on contemporary analytical theories and methods, political psychology and sociology, the conditioning role of culture, problems of conflict resolution and modernization, and recent changes in the composition, structure, and processes of the international community. The primary value of the book to the student lies in the purposeful balance of the topical and analytical methods encountered. In this connection the authors have avoided excessive use of technical language since its relevance for an introductory book would be lost on the typical reader. The authors have also sought to promote the teacher's autonomy by developing chapter discussions that lend themselves to the identification and elaboration of particular topics congenial to the instructor's own orientations toward lecturing and classroom activities.

Given the global focus of the book, the authors have sought to avoid over-emphasis on the American scene, hoping thereby to sensitize the reader to the larger dimensions of political life. Perhaps the major difference between it and several others is the amount of attention given to the subjects of science, political culture, ideology, political behavior, and the developing nations. An entire chapter is devoted to each of these subjects.

Part titles for the fourteen chapters are: "Perspectives in Politics," "Political Behavior and the Political System," "Governmental Systems," and "The International Arena."

CONFLICT IN THE MIDDLE EAST

P. J. Vatikiotis, Professor of Politics, London University, previously at Indiana University

The Middle East is an area of continuing crisis in world politics. So far a great deal of attention has been focused on the Arab-Israeli conflict, but little has been written about the political tensions within the Arab states. In this crisp and penetrating analysis, P. J. THE ROOTS OF THE RIGHT

GEORGE STEINER, General Editor

"Because the political and philosophical programme of the Right has come so near to destroying our civilization and is so alive still, it must be studied. Hence this series of source-readings in elitist, racist, and fascist theory as it was articulated in France, Germany, Italy, Spain, and other national communities between the 1860's and the Second World War. . . . STUDIES IN THE SOCIAL ASPECTS OF THE DEPRESSION

In the 1930's, the nation's leading academic societies working through the Social Science Research Council, examined the many facets of American life during the Great Depression.

The results of their investigations, these volumes describe the journeys of migrants across the land, conditions of rural life, layoffs and retrenchment in education, hardships and deprivation among minority groups, the emergence and shaping of relief policies, the deterioration of the nation's health, the impact of the crisis on religion, and new trends in criminal behavior.

Each of the 13 books in this collection has a new Preface written by Alex Baskin, of the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

A NEW YORK TIMES COMPANY

YEARBOOK ON INTERNATIONAL COMMUNIST AFFAIRS: 1970
Edited by Richard F. Staar

The yearbook is extremely valuable as a single authoritative source of an enormous number of facts which are otherwise scattered in all sorts of publications of varying reliability and accessibility, and its annual appearance will make it increasingly valuable in the future. The Times Literary Supplement

This is an excellent, well-organized, voluminously documented reference work on world Communist affairs. The Hoover Institution deserves high credit for this pioneering work which provides chronology, major Communist documents, and extremely well-done analyses. The book is highly recommended and worth the price. Library Journal

PEACEFUL CHANGE IN MODERN SOCIETY
Edited by E. Berkeley Tompkins

This collection of essays, the outcome of a conference commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Hoover Institution, discusses problems fundamental to the achievement of peaceful change throughout the world in the coming decades: nuclear and biological disarmament, the population explosion, the future of the industrial-technological revolution, and the propensity of man to pursue aggressive rather than peaceful aims.

The contributors are such men of prominence in the world of affairs as Sir Antony Eden, Nobel Peace Prize Committee Chairman Bernt Ingvaldsen, and Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs G. Warren Nutter, and such scholars as Bertrand de Jouvenal and Sidney Hook.

THE JERUSALEM QUESTION, 1917-1968

By H. Eugene Bovis

The first of the Hoover Institution Press Policy Studies, The Jerusalem Question confronts the thorny religious and political problems that plague Jerusalem today. The study traces their evolution from 1914 to the present and shows how certain critical demands of both Arabs and Israelis must be met before peace can be achieved in the area.

This is the latest, and certainly one of the most thorough and competent studies on the status and prospects of Jerusalem of those published since the 1967 war and the "unification" of West and East Jerusalem under Israeli control. . . . Mr. Bovis has produced a highly competent, scholarly work, which generates light rather than heat on this complex subject. His book is a major contribution in this field, and should prove indispensable as a reference for policy makers, a source for academic specialists and publicists, and a trustworthy guide for the reading public.

AKEL: THE COMMUNIST PARTY OF CYPRUS

By T. W. Adams

Dr. Adams has written the most complete and most enlightening study that has yet appeared on the Communist movement in Cyprus. He highlights the dilemmas of every Communist party: whether to follow a revolutionary course or to seek power through other measures, whether to lend itself to every twist and turn of Soviet policy or to adapt itself to local conditions. AKEL has had the additional dilemma of having to fluctuate between supporting the union of Cyprus with Greece and supporting the idea of an independent Cyprus. Its waffling on that issue has cost it dearly in the past and also clouds its future. Dr. Adams traces the history of the party in fascinating detail without ever losing sight of the broader international scene. On this subject, his book has no rival.

THE MAKING OF A MODEL CITIZEN IN COMMUNIST CHINA

By Charles Ridley, Paul Godwin, and Dennis Doolin

The product of a research project for the Department of H.E.W., Model Citizen analyses the political, social, and technological values that Communist China is teaching its youth. Of special interest is the final section, which explores such conflicting values as achievement motivation and sacrifice of personal ambition for society's benefit and, in so doing, helps explain the course and violence of the Red Guard movement.

The analysis is based on grammar school texts used on the mainland, and the second half of the book is composed of translations of selections from these texts.

DIRECTORY OF SELECTED SCIENTIFIC
INSTITUTIONS IN MAINLAND CHINA

Prepared by the Surveys & Research Corporation

Produced with the support of the National Science Foundation

The Directory, a ground-breaking study of Communist China's scientific establishment, lists 490 selected research institutes, their structure, selected research projects and achievements, publications, chief executives, and other related data. Five indexes and a careful introduction aid the user enormously.

In a period when Communist China is achieving unexpectedly rapid scientific and technological growth and prospects for improved Sino-American relations are high, this directory is a critical reference work.

CHINA'S NATION-BUILDING EFFORT, 1927-1937:
THE FINANCIAL AND ECONOMIC RECORD

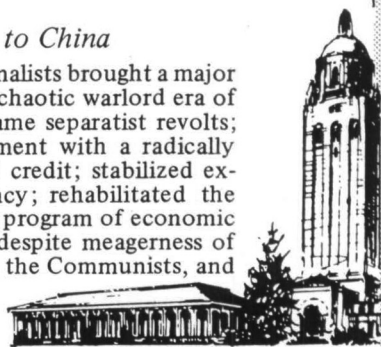

By Arthur N. Young,

Former Financial Adviser to China

This work shows that the Nationalists brought a major transformation to China after the chaotic warlord era of the twenties. They largely overcame separatist revolts; established a functioning government with a radically improved fiscal system and good credit; stabilized exchange and reformed the currency; rehabilitated the economy; and started a promising program of economic development. All this was done despite meagerness of external aid, subversive efforts of the Communists, and Japanese aggression.

VAN NOSTRAND REINHOLD'S FALL/WINTER UNVEILING

PROBLEMS AND PROSPECTS OF AMERICAN GOVERNMENT

Jay A. Sigler and Robert S. Getz. The traditions, laws and organizations which have, with frequent adjustments, served America since 1789 are increasingly questioned for their appropriateness to the 1970's and '80's. This major work weighs them against the claims of American democratic beliefs, points out their achievements and shortcomings whenever appropriate; stimulates critical thinking about current problems, and provides a perspective for those concerned with the preservation and alteration of our political life. Special issues of genuine, not necessarily fashionable, concern — slavery, violence, anti-intellectualism, poverty, etc. — are included in the chapters to illuminate essential points and to give focus to those matters important to today's and tomorrow's constituency of change. Approx. 864 pages, $10.50

TOWARD A POLITICS OF THE PLANET EARTH

Harold Sprout and Margaret Sprout. A forward-looking examination of both the social and physical forces changing the world environment, and their implications for man's survival — the sources and limitations of power, the pervasive role of technology, population explosion, worldwide ecological crisis and other factors in the thrust toward "a politics of the planet earth" and away from today's fragmented international order. 480 pages, $16.75 (Hard Cover), $12.50 (Paper)

AMERICAN GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS: A READER, 2nd Edition.

William J. Moore, Aram M. Sogomonian and George K. Zaharopoulos. Thought-provoking selections in an updated edition that amplify and illuminate important facets of American government and politics; all selected for their lasting relevance rather than short-lived topical popularity. Constitution of the United States included. Approx. 520 pages, $5.95

CONTEMPORARY PERSPECTIVES ON POLITICS

Ralph M. Goldman. One of the first texts to relate the behavioral sciences to the study of politics. Presents political behavior in terms of group communication, cooperation, and individual decisions, and the interaction of groups and individuals, leaving the emphasis to the discretion of the instructor. 400 pages, $7.50

THE SOVIET UNION UNDER BREZHNEV AND KOSYGIN: THE TRANSITION YEARS

John W. Strong. Exceptional collection of in-depth, top-quality articles on changes and developments in the Soviet Union from 1965-1968, all by eminent authorities on the different aspects of Soviet life. 277 pages, $5.95 (Hard Cover), ($3.95 Paper)

AMERICAN PLURALIST DEMOCRACY: A CRITIQUE

Darryl Baskin. Delineates the three dimensions of American pluralism: the structure and dynamics of the policy process, recurring themes in prescriptive constitutional thought, and germinal concepts in analytic theory, with emphasis on the relationships of these elements to a shared political culture. 184 pages, $5.95 (Hard Cover), $3.25 (Paper)

GAMES NATIONS PLAY

Analyzing International Politics

John Spanier

This major new text sets forth a three-part analytical framework that enables the student of international politics to comprehend—and critically evaluate—the events, issues, and policies of the postwar era. By providing three discrete levels of analysis—and illustrating how they interrelate—Games Nations Play not only shows the student how to think about international politics, but also affords the instructor far greater range, depth, and flexibility than can be found in other texts. The three analytical levels—the state system with its balance-of-power emphasis, the national system with its domestic priorities, and the decision-making system with its dependence on the policy-maker's perception of reality—guide the student through the complexities of the international system and offer a sophisticated basis for prediction, criticism, and interpretation.

TRUTH AND POWER

Essays of a Decade, 1960-1970

Hans J. Morgenthau

This provocative portrait of a decade of world affairs, viewed through the eyes of one of America's foremost political analysts, is divided into three sections: "The Philosophy," which covers such major themes as the conflict between seekers of truth and seekers of power, the right to dissent, and the revisionist view of the Cold War; "The Men," which presents profiles of major figures of the 1960's; "The Issues," which analyzes the problems that have dominated the past ten years, such as international cooperation, the changing Communist world, the Middle East conflict, and, above all, Vietnam.

A HUNDRED YEARS OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

F. S. Northedge and M. J. Grievé

Neither an orthodox detailed diplomatic history nor a work of abstract political theory, this book is a comprehensive and readable study of the development of the international political system since 1870. By using the modern development of the state system as their framework, the authors are able to select out the key themes of the last hundred years: the primacy of Europe in the late nineteenth century and the factors that lead to its decline; the origins and consequences of the two world wars and of the cold war; the emergence of the two superpowers and the entry into the system of the new nations of Asia and Africa; and the impact of nuclear weapons and international organizations on the state system.

PROBLEMS OF POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY

D. D. Raphael

This book begins with a distinctive view of philosophy as a whole and then applies this view to political philosophy in particular. The author's discussions of the state and of sovereignty lead into an analysis of the distinction between power and authority. Professor Raphael next discusses democracy as a set of ideals and as a form of government. He argues that the various devices of democracy in the West are aimed chiefly at preserving maximum freedom for individuals. The book ends with a chapter on justice, emphasizing the complexity of this concept and sorting out the difference between equality and equity, the circumstances in which discrimination is and is not improper, and the relation between justice and social utility.

WOMEN AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST: An Essay on Policy and Protest

Jessie Bernard, Pennsylvania State University

"For the contemporary women's problem, I see Bernard's book doing much the same kind of job as Charles Silberman's widely hailed Crisis in Black and White did for the race problem and black protest a decade ago."—M. Brewster Smith, University of California at Santa Cruz. 280 pp. Cloth $8.75. Paper $3.95.

WOMANKIND: Beyond the Stereotypes

Nancy Reeves, Member of the Bar in California and New York

This pathfinding work searches out the various stereotypes and assumptions that have formed women's lives in different times and places. It includes original text, parallel readings, and a photographic essay, and is being widely adopted for class use. 434 pp. Cloth $12.50. Paper $4.95.

POVERTY POLICY: A Compendium of Cash Transfer Proposals

edited by Theodore R. Marmor, University of Minnesota

Much recent debate has focused on proposals to reduce poverty by getting more cash income into the hands of poor people. This valuable new sourcebook presents the most widely considered income transfer proposals that have grown out of recent reformist debates. 241 pp. Cloth $8.50. Paper $4.95.

POLITICS OF SOUTHERN EQUALITY: Law and Social Change in a Mississippi County

Frederick M. Wirt, University of California at Berkeley

Do changes in law merely reflect changes in social attitudes—or are laws themselves instruments for changing attitudes? "What has really excited me are the chapters in which he gives a detailed and systematic account of what actually happened in Panola County—and draws inferences about why and how it happened."—From the Foreword by Gunnar Myrdal. 335 pp. $10.00.

THE CHURCH AS A POLITICAL FACTOR IN LATIN AMERICA With Particular Reference to Colombia and Chile

David E. Mutchler. Undertaken with the cooperation of Church officials, this study documents the fragmentation of Church organization in Colombia and Chile during the last decade and shows how its links with U.S. and Western European policy interests contributed to the decline of its influence in Latin American politics. It provides evidence that the CIA gave support to the Church's successful campaign against Allende in 1964.

GLOBAL POLITICS OF NUCLEAR ENERGY

Mason Willrich. In a searching political analysis of the most significant and potentially dangerous problem of the 1970s, Professor Willrich studies the interactions among science, technology and politics. He begins with an overview of the major challenges of peaceful nuclear energy, then considers international politics and nuclear policy alternatives. He analyzes the development of new technologies, including breeder reactors, nuclear-powered agro-industrial complexes, peaceful applications of nuclear explosives and controlled fusion reactors, and urges that more attention be given to political control over the process of technological development.

THE KENNEDY ROUND AND THE FUTURE OF AMERICAN TRADE

Thomas B. Curtis and John Robert Vastine, Jr. This unique account of the Kennedy Round grew out of the work of then-Congressman Curtis who served as Congressional Delegate for Trade Negotiations. The negotiations are analyzed by commodity groups. Particular problems are discussed in their legal, political and economic contexts. The authors draw sobering conclusions about the trends in world trade and make recommendations for a U.S. foreign economic policy for the 1970s.

URBAN REVOLT IN SOUTH AFRICA, 1960–1964
A CASE STUDY

by Edward Feit

Focusing on the rank and file rather than the leaders, the author details urban revolutionary action by Africans after the banning of African political organizations in 1960. He explains how the attempt at insurgency was organized; why its initial success was limited; and why, in the end, it failed. Based on the verbatim records of the trial of the insurgents, his examination of this case of urban revolt exposes some of the bureaucratic and ideological "myths" that have grown around revolutionary movements.

Politics & Society

A QUARTERLY JOURNAL

Many social scientists have been uneasy about the absence of forums for the publication of imaginative, well-written solid scholarship dealing with important political concerns. Politics and Society provides social scientists with an alternative forum. The journal encourages a variety of methodological approaches (convinced that methodological advances emerge out of work on significant problems), promotes undersupported areas of research, emphasizes the use of lucid English in its articles, and examines what Robert Lynd called "some outrageous hypotheses." We seek to promote a quest for the good community, polity, and society.

The Rise of African Nationalism in South Africa
The African National Congress, 1912-1952

Peter Walshe

Mr. Walshe has assembled a wide range of primary source materials upon which to base his detailed examination of the African National Congress, the political movement that long stood at the center of Black South African efforts to divert White governments from their apartheid policies. In the course of his study, the author also explains the Congress's essential weakness as a political organization.

Choice and the Politics of Allocation
A Developmental Theory

by David E. Apter

The problem of choice, its expansion and control, is David Apter's central concern in this book. Using a highly abstract analytical system, with development and order as dependent variables, he derives a series of behavioral propositions and compares them in modernizing and industrial societies. In what will undoubtedly be a controversial final chapter he suggests a radical equilibrium theory in which his structural conclusions are shown to work best in the context of a socialist liberal ethic. $7.95

Unions, Parties, and Political Development
A Study of Mineworkers in Zambia

by Robert H. Bates

Like most new nations, Zambia aspires to rapid economic development. Because the economy is based largely on copper production, regulation and control of the copper miners represents a crucial political task for Zambia's ambitious elite. In this study Robert Bates analyzes the attempt of the government to use the dominant political party and the Mineworkers' Union to enforce a relatively strict labor code. Since governments throughout Africa striving for economic maturity are struggling with similar problems, Bates' findings have a relevance beyond Zambia. "This study presents the best analysis that I have seen of relations between a trade union and a political party in a new African state."—Richard L. Sklar $12.50

Political Roles in a New State
Tanzania's First Decade

by Raymond F. Hopkins

The Tanzanian experiment with its essentially agricultural approach to development, the continuing effort by its leadership to make political parties a vital force in domestic politics, and its attempts to deal with the problems of tribalism continues to merit serious investigation. In this study, based on field work in Tanzania that included interviews with 109 administrators and legislators, Mr. Hopkins examines Tanzania's political system as reflected in the character of role expectations among the elite. He finds a closed system of politics developing in Tanzania that is based on consensual role expectations, and suggests that this could be a way to avoid the conflicts and violence common to many developing countries. The Three Worlds of Economics

by Lloyd G. Reynolds

In this lucid review of contemporary economic systems Mr. Reynolds presents three related convictions: that Western economic analysis requires much reshaping to be usable in either socialist or less-developed economies; that economics, viewed from a world perspective, is a larger subject than the conventional wisdom suggests; that interesting and fruitful new directions are possible in the field of comparative economics. Sophisticated but not technical, this major work by a well-known economist can be enjoyed by all interested social scientists. Studies in Comparative Economics, 12 cloth $12.50; paper $3.45

Egypt Under Nasir

A Study in Political Dynamics

By R. Hrair Dekmejian

Egypt Under Nasir is a comprehensive study of Egyptian politics since the 1952 Revolution with special emphasis on the interaction of charismatic leadership, ideology, elites, social groups, and institutions. Based predominantly on original Arabic-language sources, the study traces the evolution of the political system from 1952 through the June 1967 War and the aftermath of President Gamal Abdal-Nasir's death in 1970.

The central portion of the book is devoted to Nasir's attempts to build a new order on the basis of the legitimacy of his charisma and according to his new ideological precepts. The various constituent elements of the new revolutionary order—National Union, Arab Socialist Union, National Assembly—are discussed in detail. This section also contains an extensive study of the Egyptian power elite since 1952.

The Middle East Supply Centre

By Martin W. Wilmington

Edited by Laurence Evans
Foreword by Commander Sir Robert Jackson

During World War II, the United States and Great Britain contributed to the successful operation of a regional organization which indisputably saved the Middle East for the Allied cause and which, if perpetuated, might have formed the basis for regional peace and stability. This was the Middle East Supply Centre, whose creation, evolution, responsibilities, and activities are described analytically in this volume.

Beyond the author's narrative and analysis of the Centre's wartime logistical activities, he has placed the whole enterprise in a far larger setting: Anglo-American collaboration; the imperious influence of world powers; the aspirations of underdeveloped nations; and the growth in the area of "economic regionalism."

CONTENDING THEORIES OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University

■ This important new book represents both an overview and a synthesis of international relations theory. The major theories from ancient times to the present are examined, though the authors deal principally with theory-building efforts since 1950. Extensive discussion is given to theories of conflict, war and revolution, from Aristotle to Mao, Giap, Guevara, Debray, and Fanon. Pacifism, imperialism, balance of power, realist theory, man-milieu relationships, international systems theory, theories of international integration, decision-making, theories of conflict and deterrence, disarmament and arms control, are all presented in their historical context.

INTERNATIONAL LAW AND ORGANIZATION

An Introductory Reader

Edited by Richard A. Falk, Princeton University, and Wolfram F. Hanrieder, University of California, Santa Barbara

■ Moving beyond traditional emphasis on legalistic and formalistic aspects, the editors project the study of international law and organization into the wider setting of international politics. The distinctive features of a decentralized legal system are stressed, and strong support is given for the editors' conviction that communication, not restraint, is the main function of law and organization in a social system that lacks a government. Fourteen selections by distinguished scholars provide students with an introduction to the important questions that bear on the character of contemporary international order.

Reform and Responsiveness in American Politics Readings in the Problems of Democratic Institutions

Edited by Dennis Ippolito and Thomas G. Walker, Emory University

For courses in American government, this distinctive new reader explores the ways in which government responds to citizens' demands for change. It examines government's potential for reform by analyzing the relationships among three categories of institutions through which the public is linked to governmental behavior and policy: participatory institutions (elections, direct action), intermediate institutions (pressure groups, political parties), and primary institutions (the Presidency, the Congress, the judiciary, the bureaucracy). The readings, which illustrate how these institutions function, have been chosen to reveal the weaknesses as well as the strengths of American politics. The text includes an introduction analyzing the question of responsiveness and presenting the linkage model, short introductions to each section of readings, and a concluding essay on the necessity of and prospects for reform.

Vietnam before we were there.

The first study in English of pre-colonial nineteenth century Vietnam, this is the only book anywhere in any language that compares the civil governments of two traditional East Asian societies on an institution-by-institution basis through a detailed study of the surviving statutes of both societies.

A full understanding of Vietnam requires knowledge of its political and cultural development. Specifically, the manner in which Vietnamese political and cultural institutions were influenced by those of the Chinese.

Dr. Woodside analyzes the government of Vietnam a century and a half ago and compares it with the contemporary government of China, tracing the Chinese influence in not only Vietnamese government and administration but also in society and culture down to the village level.

This is an important book, in the best sense of the word. Its impact on the field of Vietnam studies is certain to be significant and widely felt.

REMAKING CHINA POLICY: US-China Relations and Governmental Decisionmaking

Richard Moorsteen/Morton Abramowitz

“A way of thinking about China policy, a way that is imaginative, thorough, and as objective as possible.”

— John King Fairbank

“A unique and valuable book...in essence a memorandum for the President...(gives) the general public a rare insight into the process whereby important decisions of foreign policy are made...”

“Both Mr. Moorsteen and Mr. Abramowitz are experienced bureaucrats as well as China experts.”

Regional Integration Theory and Research

Leon N. Lindberg and Stuart A. Scheingold, Editors

Piecing together a peaceful world

The ten critical essays in this work represent the variety of theories and approaches of the chief contributors in the field of regional integration, the study of non-coercive integration among nations.

Focusing on research strategies and techniques, the authors probe new directions for added insights into the integrative process—problems of nation-building, integration of planned economies, and consequences of regional consolidation.

The authors also evaluate the first decade of the study of regional integration and report on current disputes and prospects for future research.

“Th’ government gives us too little amusement nowadays.”

Mr. Dooley

The Little Legislatures Committees of Congress

GEORGE GOODWIN, JR.

Traces the development of the committee system in both the House and Senate from the beginnings of World War II through the Johnson Administration and analyzes the organization, make-up and assignment traditions of standing committees – and presents ideas for reform. Standing committees are now such powerful forces, says Professor Goodwin, that on occasion they stand as equals to the President.

Wendell Willkie Fighter for Freedom

ELLSWORTH BARNARD

A record of the essential facts in the life of Wendell Willkie.
“An ‘inheritor of unfulfilled renown’ Willkie certainly was, but he deserved and has got a learned, intelligent, and loving biography” – Times Literary Supplement.
Cloth, $10.00; paper, $5.00; 624 pp.

The Politics of Defeat Campaigning for Congress

ROBERT J. HUCKSHORN &
ROBERT C. SPENCER

A study of the losing candidates in a congressional election that also surveys the impact of party recruitment, campaign techniques, and issues on the election outcome – and provides solid research on congressional campaigning itself.

Cloth, $8.50; paper, $2.50; 272 pp.

The Supreme Court in Crisis A History of Conflict

ROBERT J. STEAMER

A history of the Supreme Court’s exercise of judicial review, with an emphasis on the periodic conflicts between Court and one or both of the two great sources of power in the American system, the Congress and the Presidency.

NEW 1971

● POLITICAL PARTIES AND POLITICAL BEHAVIOR Second Edition

William J. Crotty, Northwestern University; Donald M. Freeman, University of West Florida; and Douglas S. Gatlin, Florida Atlantic University

This new edition of the leading collection of readings in the field of political parties contains articles of relevance to the 1970's. Readings on race relations, violence, and youth in politics are related to the more established characteristics of the American party system. Introductions to each of the chapters interrelate the specific pieces contained in the chapter and integrate these into the overall framework of the book. 1971, Paperbound, 608 pp.

COMING IN 1972

● POLITICAL ANALYSIS: An Introduction

M. Margaret Conway, University of Maryland; and Frank B. Feigert, State University of New York at Brockport

In this comprehensive core text, the authors present and evaluate the methods and concepts used to develop the explanatory theory of modern political science. Based upon the authors' teaching experience, the material requires no background in political science. 1972, Paperbound, est. 528 pp.

COMING IN 1972

● CONTROVERSIES OF STATE AND LOCAL POLITICAL SYSTEMS

Mavis Mann Reeves and Parris N. Glendening, both of the University of Maryland

A collection of original essays and previously published material, this anthology examines the controversies of modern state and local government. The traditional topics of constitutional revision, council manager government, and judicial reform are excluded in favor of relevant topics such as urban riots, desegregation, and decentralization. 1972, Paperbound, est. 464 pp.

COMING IN 1972

● PARTICIPATION IN AMERICAN POLITICS: The Dynamics of Agenda-Building

Roger W. Cobb and Charles D. Elder, both of the University of Pennsylvania

This comprehensive text introduces and systematically develops the concept of agenda-building—a model for the analysis of the life cycle of public policy issues—as an organizational framework for linking mass participation and elite decision-making in American politics. Theoretical statements are interwoven with concrete contemporary examples from local, state, and national politics. 1972, Paperbound, est. 208 pp.

COMING IN 1972

● POLITICAL BEHAVIOR OF THE AMERICAN ELECTORATE Second Edition

William H. Flanigan, University of Minnesota

Updated to include contemporary issues, this new edition describes participation and partisanship in recent elections. The text—drawing upon the major national surveys of 1952, 1956, 1960, 1964, and 1968—relates changing patterns of turnout and party loyalty to social and economic factors. The presentation of data requires no background in statistics or in political science. 1972, Paperbound, est. 146 pp.

Help Your Political Scientists Reduce Literature Search Time

Book reviews praise the URS, POLITICAL SCIENCE, GOVERNMENT and PUBLIC POLICY SERIES.

"The research library will find this a useful reference tool."
LIBRARY JOURNAL

"... a significant attempt to index materials in depth and with a far greater number of descriptors for individual items than will be found in more conventional indexes."
WILSON LIBRARY BULLETIN

"Its design reflects erudite developments and the concomitant informational needs of social scientists..."

CHOICE

Hundreds of librarians in more than thirty countries are helping researchers in the political, behavioral and social sciences reduce literature research time. From days... to minutes.
With the Universal Reference System.

More than 35,000 titles are covered in the 10-volume basic library and annual supplements. Papers. Articles. Books. And other political works. Issued by some 2400 publishers and 800 journals, domestic and foreign. With the information systematically indexed, organized, readily accessible. And continuously updated with annual supplements (about 5-6000 new items are added each year) through 1970. So the researcher will be able to quickly uncover more relevant titles - current as well as retrospective - than would be possible by any other method.

For full details on the Universal Reference System... and why it belongs on your library shelf, contact Princeton Information

The Price of International Justice

PHILIP C. JESSUP. Foreword by Andrew Cordier. An impressionistic picture of the two-hundred year old system under which States submit their disputes to international tribunals for adjudication. The author describes five international disputes which were submitted to and decided by an international court on the basis of international law. Also examined are cases of disagreement in which the opportunity for a just settlement was disregarded and the "price" for peace not paid.

Soviet Nationality Problems

EDWARD ALLWORTH, editor. This volume demonstrates the extraordinary range of nationality problems besetting the USSR many of which have been reawakened by economic advance and unusual population increases. Several original maps give an explicitly geographical idea of the minorities problem in the Soviet Union and research sources are discussed in a bibliographical section. $9.95

The Political System of Brazil:

Emergence of a "Modernizing" Authoritarian Regime, 1964-1970

RONALD M. SCHNEIDER. Students of Latin American affairs as well as social scientists in general will find much of great interest in this unusual study of the triumph and subsequent rule of an authoritarian military regime in one of the most important countries of the developing world. Dr. Schneider examines the fundamental themes which have recurred in Brazilian affairs as each regime has sought to combine its developmental goals with its perceptions of the political and security imperatives of a self-proclaimed "revolutionary state."

THE HIGHWAY RISK PROBLEM

Policy Issues in Highway Safety

By ROBERT F. BAKER, Transport Research Consultant

Until it is understood that accidents result from normal risks rather than from unsafe conditions of roads and equipment, a significant reduction of highway fatalities is not possible. The Highway Risk Problem takes a new view of highway safety and argues for precise statements of policy in place of idealistic and nebulous goals. The author thinks that the first major issue to resolve is the annual number of fatalities that will be tolerated, in light of the inevitable increase in costs and loss of mobility that are closely associated with this matter. Policy must delineate the public and private resources that will be allocated to the highway safety program, and must take into account the political and social constraints that will limit particular courses of action.

THE NATURE OF SUBJECTIVE CULTURE

An Approach to Cross-Cultural Social Psychology

By HARRY C. TRIANDIS, University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. In Association with Vasso Vassiliou and George Vassiliou, Athenian Institute of Anthropos, Athens, Greece; Yasumasa Tanaka, Gakushuin University, Tokyo, Japan; and A. V. Shanmugam, Indian Institute of Mass Communication, New Delhi, India

A Volume in Comparative Studies in Behavioral Science: A Wiley Series edited by Robert Holt and John Turner

"Differences in subjective culture are responsible for a good deal of intergroup conflict. In this book we hope to provide some concepts and new methodologies for its analysis and some insight into its relation to human conflict."

—from the Preface

A new way of thinking about cross-cultural comparisons, The Analysis of Subjective Culture extracts the essential similarities and differences in human cognition across cultures. Appearing for the first time in print are extensive reviews of the literature and methodology of cross-cultural studies that employ standard psychological measurement procedures. The new methodology developed in the book is applied to recent studies of stereotyping, role perception, cognitive bonds, and interpersonal attitudes. There is a thorough discussion of the implications of this analysis for a variety of applied investigations.

PLANNING ON UNCERTAINTY

Decision Making in Business and Government Administration

By RUTH P. MACK, Institute of Public Administration

Planning on Uncertainty presents a comprehensive view of administrative involvement in the ongoing process of decision-making. Examining how, where, and when information is in short supply during deliberative procedures, the author demonstrates how the nature of each particular problem, from inventory control to broad questions of policy, defines the manner in which it must be approached. The argument that in all cases the cost of uncertainty must be kept to a minimum is developed in three major steps. Part One, Choice by "Rational" Man, describes the fundamentals of statistical decision theory. Part Two, Choice by Natural Man, develops a typology for a realistic range of decision situations. Part Three, Ongoing Deliberative Processes, deals with real life situations, in which decision proper is only one link in a chain of behavior. The book includes a checklist of over fifty specific ways to reduce the cost of uncertainty.

WORLD COMMUNICATION: THREAT OR PROMISE?

A Socio-technical Approach

By COLIN CHERRY, Imperial College, University of London

A global, social view of the communication process, World Communication: Threat or Promise? examines the nature of human communication itself, and then looks at various aspects of today's so-called communication explosion and its implications for the future. The author concludes that our rapidly expanding global systems of communication offer, as their main values, great organizing powers with which new and practical institutions can be operated, for the development of trade, exchange, and international law.

CONTENTS: Introduction. On the Nature of Human Communication. On Communication, Ancient and Modern. The Communication Explosion. Communication, Politics and Pleasure. Communication and Wealth. Some Social Aspects of World Communication. Bibliography. Index.

INFORMATION AND ITS USERS

A Review with Special Reference to the Social Sciences

By J. M. BRITAIN, Bath University

Information and Its Users deals with the methods that have been used to establish information needs and requirements in research, teaching, and practice. The suitability of established methods of user studies in science and technology for investigating social science information needs and requirements is questioned. The book argues that there are certain fundamental differences between the sciences and the social sciences which must be taken into account when studying information needs and requirements of the social sciences. There is extensive discussion about the way in which information in the social sciences flows through both formal and informal channels, the nature of research in the social sciences, the topicality of the results of social research, its national support, and the application of the results of research to social problems. A valuable reference tool, Information and Its Users contains a comprehensive bibliography and brings together material from a wide range of disciplines.

YOU MEAN I CAN GET $50,000 OF TIAA LIFE INSURANCE FOR LESS THAN $100?

That's what an Assistant Professor asked us when he heard about TIAA's low life insurance costs.

It's true. At his age 30 the annual premium for a 20-Year Home Protection policy providing $50,000 initial amount of insurance is $159.00. The first-year dividend, based on our current dividend scale, is $61.50, making a net payment of $97.50. Dividends, of course, are not guaranteed.

The Home Protection plan is level premium Term insurance providing its largest amount of protection initially, reducing by schedule each year to recognize decreasing insurance needs. This is just one example of the many low-cost TIAA plans available. If you need more protection for your family, ask us to mail you a personal illustration with figures for a policy issued at your age. We'll also send the Life Insurance Guide describing other TIAA policies.

ELIGIBILITY

Eligibility to apply for this or other TIAA life insurance is limited to persons employed at the time of application by a college, university, private school, or other nonprofit educational or scientific institution that qualifies for TIAA eligibility.
