

929-5363. This was the first restaurant in Chicago's "Lettuce Entertain You" chain. These were the people who almost singlehandedly introduced an eclectic, cheerful menu and salad bar approach to Chicago. The food is still excellent and the prices moderate. For good value, try the hamburgers, omelettes, or teriyaki chicken.

Taylor and Western Area

Florence, 1030 W. Taylor, 829-1857. Long a favorite in this Italian section of the near southwest side, this homey and delightful spot offers a limited but interesting selection of central and northern Italian dishes. Pasta dishes run about $5-$6 and include such specialties as broccoli and carrot, walnut and garlic, gorgonzola, and clam sauces. Rosemary chicken and a gorgonzola-filled hamburger are favorite specials, and the desserts shouldn't be missed.

La Fontanella, 2414 S. Oakley, 929-5249. This is a longstanding, family-run restaurant where you can eat quite heartily for $6-9. The squid with fettucini is particularly good here, as is the veal and prosciutto in wine sauce. There are daily specials such as seafood salads, linguine, and chicken parmigiana. The Chicken Sylvia is quite popular, and is made with lots of garlic.

Chinatown

Hong Min, 221 W. Cermak, 842-5026. This is a place for the tourist as well as the purist. For the tourist, there is one menu with basic Cantonese favorites. For the purist, there is another with 40 entrees and a variety of soups. Try the winter melon soup, practically solid with seafood and pork, and the hot and sour soup. An assortment of other Mandarin and Cantonese dishes, including snails in black bean and garlic hot sauce, a pickled seafood assortment (squid, scallops and cuttlefish) with hot oil and onion, and kung pao dishes (hot dishes with peanuts), are all worthwhile. □

William Riker, Abner Mikva, Others To Be Featured

Program Chair of the 1983 Annual Meeting Herbert Weisberg of Ohio State University has announced three plenary sessions including the Presidential Address by William Riker, the Lasswell Symposium on "The Science of Politics," and a special plenary session on Gender Politics in the 1980s.

The session on gender politics will be chaired by Barbara Sinclair of the University of California, Riverside. Other participants in the Saturday evening session will be Judge Abner Mikva of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, D.C., Ruth Mandel of the Eagleton Institute at Rutgers University, Jean Elstain of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and Virginia Sapiro of the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Kal Holsti of the University of British Columbia, Gerald Kramer of the California Institute of Technology, and Duncan MacRae, Jr., of the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, will each deliver a paper for the Lasswell Symposium.

The subject of the 1983 Lasswell Symposium in which senior scholars participate by invitation is the science of politics. This theme is the same as that of the overall 1983 Annual Meeting, although Weisberg has repeatedly emphasized that the Annual Meeting, which will be held at the Palmer House in Chicago from September 1-4, will include a much broader range of subjects than can be encompassed in a single theme.

Every one of the 23 sections of the program will include a special theme panel constructed by the heads of the sections to highlight the overall theme of the science of politics. These panels will be held throughout the Annual Meeting.

Dialogue Panels

In addition, dialogue panels initiated by the Caucus for a New Political Science under the leadership of Bertell Ollman of New York University will be held. The Caucus has established 12 panels, which include "mainstream" and "radical" political scientists who will discuss their approaches and differences on major topics in the discipline. The dialogues will be sponsored jointly by the Caucus and APSA and will be a part of the official program. Weisberg has waived the dual participation rule for these panels.

APSA President William Riker will deliver his presidential address after the presentation of awards on Thursday, September 1, at the Annual Meeting in Chicago.

The dialogue panels are scheduled throughout the Annual Meeting and are structured as follows:

Dialogues on Major Issues in Political Science

Panel 1: Liberalism. Moderator: Mark Roelofs, New York University. Discussants: Theodore Lowi, Cornell University; Philip Converse, University of Michigan; Peter Bachrach, Temple University; Zillah Eisenstein, Ithaca College.

Panel 2: Democracy. Moderator: Paul Thomas, University of California-Berkeley. Discussants: Robert Dahl, Yale University; Sheldon Wolin, Princeton University; C. B. MacPherson, University of Toronto (health permitting).

Panel 3: Political Science—A Science? Moderator: Theodore Norton, Vassar College. Discussants: David Easton, University of Chicago; William Riker, University of Rochester; Nancy Hartsock, Johns Hopkins University; Terrence Ball, University of Minnesota.

Panel 4: State in Capitalist Society. Moderator: Carl Boggs, University of Southern California. Discussants: Sidney Verba, Harvard University; David Apter, Yale University; Ralph Miliband, Brandeis University; Stephen Bronner, Rutgers University.

Panel 5: Welfare State. Moderator: Charles Noble, Rutgers University. Discussants: Frances Fox Piven, City University of New York-Graduate Center; Ira Katznelson, University of Chicago.

Panel 6: Class Consciousness. Moderator: Joan Landes, Hampshire College. Discussants: Seymour Martin Lipset, Stanford University; Bertell Ollman, New York University.

Panel 7: Comparative Politics. Moderator: Vincent Brevetti, Columbia University. Discussants: Gabriel Almond, Stanford University; Leon Epstein, University

Jean Elshtain of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, will be one of the panelists at the Saturday evening plenary session, Gender Politics in the 1980s, at the Annual Meeting.

Ruth B. Mandel, author of In the Running, will participate in the plenary session on gender politics.

of Wisconsin; Mark Kesselman, Columbia University; James Petras, State University of New York-Binghamton.

Panel 8: Nuclear War as an Instrument of Foreign Policy. Moderator: Hayward Alker, M.I.T. Discussants: Karl Deutsch, Harvard University; Richard Falk, Princeton University.

Panel 9: Class vs. Elite Theories. Moderator: Philip Brenner, American University. Discussants: Nelson W. Polsby, University of California-Berkeley; Aaron Wildavsky, University of California-Berkeley; Michael Parenti, Institute for Policy Studies; Philip Green, Smith College.

Panel 10: Public Choice vs. Marxist Explanations. Moderator: Frank Fischer, Rutgers University. Discussants: Russell Hardin, University of Chicago; Richard Arneson, University of California-San Diego; John Elster, University of Oslo; Timothy Luke, Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

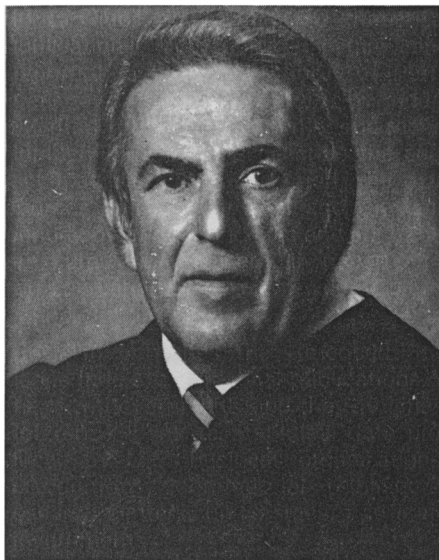

Panel 11: Political Economy. Moderator: Steven Sachs, University of Indiana-Indianapolis. Discussants: Charles Lind-blom, Yale University; Harry Magdoff, Monthly Review Magazine.

Panel 12: Human Rights and Political Obligation. Moderator: Nicole Fermon, Columbia University. Discussants: Richard Flathman, Johns Hopkins University; Christian Bay, University of Toronto; Cornell West, Union Theological Seminary. □

Workshops Planned for Applied Political Scientists

The Annual Meeting will feature a number of workshops and panels that reflect the interest of political scientists in careers in applied settings. The Association is sponsoring a careers workshop on Wednesday, August 31 entitled, "Scholars in Transition: From the Academy to the Market Place." The workshop will instruct participants in the tasks and skills needed for establishing careers in applied settings.

Judge Abner Mikva, U.S. Court of Appeals, D.C., will present his perspective on the women's movement at the Annual Meeting. Mikva is a former member of Congress and has recently published The American Congress: The First Branch, co-authored with Patti B. Saris.

The Committee of Applied Political Scientists will sponsor a roundtable, "Retrofitting Ph.D.s for Careers in Business." The panel will include as participants political scientists who took part in summer retraining institutes at the University of Pennsylvania, NYU, UCLA, University of Texas at Austin, and the University of Virginia.

The section on the profession organized by Trudi Miller will also include a broad range of panels touching upon applied political science and scientists. The panels will include: Teaching Applied Political Science; Applied Political Science in the Private Sector; Political Scientists in Washington; From Applied to Basic Research; From Practice to Science and Back Again; Political Science in the Electronic Information Age; and Realism: The Growing Bond Between Science and Practice.

Departmental placement officers should take note of the varied nature of the program and encourage students and faculty interested in careers in applied settings to attend the workshops and panels. □

Retrofitting the Ph.D. for Business Careers

Political scientists have entered careers in applied settings by many routes. Some have gone directly from graduate school to a career in government or business; some have taught at a college or university and then left untenured and tenured positions for careers outside academia.

For many political scientists the transition from academia to applied setting was made without additional training. For others a retraining program proved to be a necessary and valuable way of making the move from academia to work in applied settings. Several universities offer summer "careers in business" programs designed to "retrofit" Ph.D.s for business careers. These programs have been featured in the Association's Personnel Service Newsletter.

To familiarize members with the summer training programs, the Committee of Applied Political Scientists is sponsoring a panel at the Annual Meeting in Chicago entitled, "Retrofitting the Ph.D. for Careers in Business." Participants in the roundtable will be political scientists who have gone through the summer programs offered by the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Virginia, the University of Texas at Austin, UCLA, and New York University.

The participants will describe their respective programs, discuss who the programs best serve, describe the placement procedures that exist, and explain their current jobs or job searches. The roundtable will provide a chance for interested members to hear a frank discussion of the retraining programs. An opportunity will be provided for interested parties to speak on an informal basis with the roundtable participants. □

APSA Offers Workshop on Computerizing Departments

Department chairs in colleges and universities are facing the question as to whether their departments need a microcomputer to help with general administrative tasks, forecast decision-making, accounting, word processing, and data analysis. The question is made more difficult to answer given the often bewildering array of hardware and software that confront both the experienced user and the novice.

The Departmental Service Committee will sponsor a workshop for departmental chairs at the annual meeting that will deal with basic questions regarding the appropriateness of microcomputers for administrative and research needs of large and small departments in colleges and universities.

The workshop will be conducted by Samuel Kirkpatrick, Chair, Texas A&M, and Gregory Marks, Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research, University of Michigan.

The workshop will be held Friday, September 2, from 10:45 to 12:30. All chairs of departments are cordially invited to attend the workshop. □