With deep regret we record the death, on 26th February 1991, of the Founder of the McDonald Institute for Archaeological Research and of the Cambridge Archaeological Journal, Dr D M McDonald. A keen student of many aspects of the Ancient World, he was closely involved in the conception and planning of the Journal, which will continue to reflect and commemorate his interest in the early development of human rationality and intellectual abilities. This first issue, which he did not live to see in print, is dedicated to his memory.
