THE EARLIEST LIVES OF JESUS

R. M. Grant

18s. 6d. net

Published in the U.S.A. by Harper & Brothers

An examination of the works of Origen and his predecessors reveals an awareness of the historical problems presented by the four gospels. Methods were sometimes borrowed from contemporary pagan writers to solve these problems. Dr Grant considers these methods. His findings bring fresh considerations to bear in assessing the achievements of the Fathers, and of Origen in particular, in their interpretation of the life of Jesus.

THE THEOLOGY OF ACTS IN ITS HISTORICAL SETTING

J. C. O'Neill

25s. net

A consideration of the central theological purpose of Acts based on the belief that it was written in the first half on the second century as an apology to unbelievers in Rome. The author argues his theory ably, presenting and discussing the evidence in a way that students especially will find valuable.

CHRISTIAN FAITH AND PASTORAL CARE

C. D. Kean

15s. net

Published in the U.S.A. by the Seabury Press

This is a book for all clergymen and others who have to deal with the problems of others. Dr Kean makes a thorough and practical examination of the many difficulties involved in effective pastoral care; he emphasizes the intimate connection between pastoral care, Christian faith, and the doctrine of the Church. Here we have set forth the way in which, on a basis of sure faith and sound doctrine, pastor and layman can help those in trouble.

ACADEMIC ILLUSION

Denis Bayly

17s. 6d. net

Published in the U.S.A. by the Seabury Press

A penetrating analysis of the predicament of the American university to-day: the invasion of institutions of higher learning by the ills of contemporary society—the senselessness of power, the lethargy, the symptoms of insecurity and indifference. At a time of great expansion in university life here, when new institutions are forming their traditions and the whole position of the university in national life is the subject of debate, what Professor Bayly says is by no means irrelevant to the English scene.

DOWN-TO-EARTH RELIGION

By ERIC G. FROST

10s 6d net

The strong desire for a religion of convincing reality is a normal hunger of our human nature. God made us for himself. Yet for numerous people, inside as well as outside our churches, this natural craving remains unsatisfied. They simply do not "arrive". They are hindered quite as much by uncertainties of personal kind as by intellectual difficulties. Many of these problems would melt before a clearer understanding of the Christian experience, and that is what this book sets out to provide.

UNDERSTANDING THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT

By HARVEY K. McARTHUR

15s net

From the crowds of Galilee, who were astonished by its teaching, to Gandhi, who found in it the inspiration to transform a nation, The Sermon on the Mount has been the most creative and debated source of Western man's moral life. The author frankly faces the ethical, historical and theological problems it poses for a 20th-century reader.

LUKE THE HISTORIAN IN RECENT STUDY

By C. KINGSLEY BARRETT. (The A. S. Peake Memorial Lecture, 1961)
8s 6d net

What made Luke a historian, and led him—alone, so far as we know, among his contemporaries—to write the story of Christianity from the birth of Jesus to Paul's mission to Rome? How was his work affected by the example of older historians? What was his attitude to the theological problems of his day? These are among the questions raised by this lecture.

Christ and Us

JEAN DANIELÉLOU

A translation of Approches du Christ by Walter Roberts

'The aim of the present work,' says the author in his Introduction, 'is to provide a kind of Summa'—a comprehensive survey, from the standpoint of every intellectual discipline, of Christian speculation concerning the Incarnate Word of God.

Beginning with the historical approach and the historical 'fact' of Christ, the author first examines the environmental factors and shows how those documents which clearly describe the humanity of Christ also make it clear that the humanity in question is that of the Son of God. This leads on to a skilful examination of the Incarnation, which, in its turn, requires the author to establish his next position that, although the Incarnation is a unique event, it is none the less in strict continuity with the saving acts of God in Israel and is prophetically and typologically present in the Old Testament scheme of things.

Theology must, however, reconcile itself to the critical examination of the philosopher, and in the chapter entitled 'Philosophy and Christology' the author comes to grips with recent philosophical attitudes and cogently argues that attempts to reduce the fact of Christ to a rational category are ill-founded. Christ belongs to an order of His own.

Thus free to return to Holy Scripture, the author now considers the mysteries of the Word made Flesh—the mysteries of the childhood, of the public ministry, of the Passion and Resurrection. Thereafter, he turns to consider the relation of Christ to the Church, and to the preaching office of the Church, the Sacraments, and the Church's world-wide mission, and concludes his survey with an examination of the part played by the Word in His personal encounter with the believing soul.

A New Approach to Colossians

L. J. BAGGOTT, Canon of Norwich, Archdeacon of Norfolk

In this scholarly and interesting work the Archdeacon of Norfolk develops a striking thesis based on St. Paul's Epistle to the Colossians. Any apparent disharmony between the scientific and the religious approaches to experience can be disposed of, he argues, by a realization of the essential oneness with Creation of the Christian religion. Christ is not merely the Saviour of men and women, He is the Cosmic Christ. This thesis is worked out against the background of a close examination and exposition of the Epistle (which is also newly translated), making this book also valuable as a commentary.
