

from University of Texas at Tyler until September 1992.

Binnaz Toprak, visiting professor from Bogaczi University, Istanbul, Turkey, department of political science, University of Minnesota, 1991-92.

James Willson-Quayle, visiting assistant professor, department of politics, Wake Forest University; formerly London School of Economics.

Award Recipients

American Bar Association Mini-Grants

Micheal Giles, department of political science, Emory University, will be the project director of "Computer Courseware on the History and Structure of American Courts." The university has received $1,000 from the Commission on College and University Nonprofessional Legal Studies of the American Bar Association to develop a software package on the history of the federal courts and the structure of federal and state courts.

American Council of Learned Societies

The political scientists listed below have received fellowships and grants from the American Council of Learned Societies. A federation of 51 scholarly organizations, the Council is located at 228 East 45th Street, New York, NY 10017-3398. Phone: (212) 697-1505.

Fellowships for Recent Ph.D. Recipients for Research

Aili M. Tripp, assistant professor of political science and women's studies, University of Wisconsin, Madison. The urban informal economy and the state in Tanzania.

Grants-in-Aid for Postdoctoral Research

H. Richard Friman, assistant professor of political science, Marquette University. Between cooperation and conflict: developed countries and the international drug trade.

Michael Goldfield, assistant professor of government, Cornell University. The failure of Operation Dixie and the nature of American politics.

Amal Kavar, associate professor of political science, Utah State University. Palestinian women leaders in the Palestinian movement for self-determination and statehood.

Ralph A. Thaxton, associate professor of politics, Brandeis University. From rebellion to revolution: state making, collective protest and the origins of communist power on the north China plain, 1915-1949.

Chiang Ching-kuo Dissertation Research Fellows (sponsored jointly with Social Science Research Council)

Susan H. Whiting, graduate student, University of Michigan. Power and wealth in the Chinese township: the political economy of local entrepreneurship.

Jian Yuan, graduate student, Yale University. Private property and socialist economy—development of private enterprise in China.

East European Studies (sponsored jointly with Social Science Research Council)

Post-doctoral Research

Jan Kubik, assistant professor of political science, Rutgers University, New Brunswick. Polish local politics in transition: an ethnography of democratization.

A. James McAdams, assistant professor of political science, Princeton University. Inter-German relations of a new type—towards a new Germany.

Research and Writing of Dissertations

Paul Franklin Lytle, Yale University. Symbolic construction of power: revolutionary mobilization in Yugoslavia.

Wales R. Mack, University of California, Berkeley. Rolling back the state and bringing the market back in: prices and property rights in Polish agriculture.

Jason McDonald, University of California, Berkeley. Changing identities: elite economists as politicians in postwar Hungary.

Andrzej W. Tymowski, Yale University. East European social movements in the transition period: a historical/sociological analysis of representative movements.

Advanced Graduate Study and Training for Dissertations

Claire A. Rosenson, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Language training, training in methodological skills, and special coursework preparatory to research in comparative political culture.

Grants for Eastern European Language Training

Lorene Marie Allio, Emory University, for the study of Polish.

Milene K. Novy, Yale University, for the study of Czech.

John Paul Richardson, University of California, San Diego, for the study of Czech.

Karl W. Ryavec, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, for the study of Slovene.

Bunting Institute

Former Vermont governor Madeleine Kunin and political scientists Nancy Hirschmann and Margaret Pearson are among the 45 women from the United States and six foreign countries who have been appointed fellows for 1991-92 at the Mary Ingraham Bunting Institute of Radcliffe College.

Madeleine M. Kunin is the first Radcliffe Distinguished Visitor in Public Policy. She is writing a political memoir.

Nancy J. Hirschmann, assistant professor of political science at Cornell University, is analyzing the place and treatment of women in the work of John Locke.

Margaret Pearson, assistant professor of political science at Dartmouth

Madeleine M. Kunin

College, is examining the role played by "foreign sector managers" in China, in her research project "The Emergence of Civil Society in China: Foreign Sector Managers and the Socialist State."

The Bunting Institute promotes scholarship, research, and the creative arts through approximately 45 fellowships per year to women scholars, scientists, artists, and writers from across the United States and around the world. For information and applications, write or call The Bunting Institute of Radcliffe College, 34 Concord Avenue, Cambridge, MA 02138. Phone: (617) 495-8212. Fax: (617) 495-8422.

Nancy J. Hirschmann

Margaret Pearson

Dirksen Center

Fifteen writers, researchers and graduate students received grants totaling $20,000 through the Dirksen Center's 1991 Congressional Research Grants Program. The Dirksen Center gave its first research grant in 1975 and since then has provided over $180,000 to 135 congressional research projects.

This year's grant recipients were:

Scott Ainsworth, University of Georgia; Managing the Senate Floor: Leaders and Unanimous Consent Agreements.

William P. Browne, Central Michigan University; How Congress Decides: The Changing Dimensions of Agricultural, Rural and Related Environmental Policymaking.

Gregory A. Caldeira and Samuel C. Patterson, Ohio State University; The Social Matrix of Senate Leadership.

Jean M. Choate, Iowa State University; William Lemke and the National Farmers Process Tax Recovery Association.

Ken Collier, University of Kansas; White House Relations with Congress.

William F. Connelly, Jr., Washington and Lee University; The Permanent Minority Status of House Republicans.

Richard F. Fenno, Jr., University of Rochester; Research on the Explanatory Process in Senate Campaigns.

Shirley M. Geiger, University of South Carolina; The Effects of Environmental Change on Leadership Interactions and Decision Making in Subcommittees of the House Committee on Appropriations.

Malcolm E. Jewell, University of Kentucky and Marcia L. Whicker, Virginia Commonwealth University; Comparing the Leadership Styles of Congressional and State Legislative Leaders.

Janann Sherman, Rutgers University; From Senate to White House: Margaret Chase Smith in the 'Presidential Incubator.'

Brooks D. Simpson, Arizona State University; Republican Realignment in the United States Senate, 1869-1880.

Barbara Sinclair, University of California-Riverside; Leadership Strength as a Response to Partisan Adversity: House Majority Party Leadership in the 1990s.

Randall W. Strahan, Emory University; Congressional Leadership in Institutional Time.

Randall B. Woods, University of Arkansas; a biography of Senator J. William Fulbright.

National Endowment for the Humanities Collaborative Rights

The Collaborative Projects Category of the Interpretive Research Program of NEH has announced its awards for FY 1991.

Following are the political scientists with their affiliations and research topics.

Dublin, Thomas L., SUNY Research Foundation/Binghamton, Development and Decline in the Anthracite Region of Pennsylvania (1991-1994).

Goldstein, Melvyn C., Case Western Reserve University, A Social and Political History of Tibet: 1951-59 (1991-1994).

Graubard, Stephen R., American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Studies of 20th-Century Nationalism (1991-1994).

Lieberthal, Kenneth G., University of Michigan, Forming the Communist State in China: The Culminating Steps (1991-1994).

Nekrich, Aleksandr M., Harvard University, Restructuring the Soviet Past: The Politics of History under Gorbachev (1991-1993).

Ross, George W., Brandeis University, The Double Shift and the Changing Place of European Labor (1991-1993).

Symcox, Geoffrey, University of California, Los Angeles, Computer Analysis of the 1705 Census of Turin (1991-1993).

National Science Foundation

The following political science students received fellowships for graduate study from the National Science Foundation.

Gerald Alfred, Cornell University, will continue at Cornell with his studies.

Sharon R. Wesoky, Brandeis University, will study at Cornell University.

NATO Advanced Research Fellowships

Robert S. Jordan, research professor of international institutions, department of political science, University of New Orleans, has received a NATO Advanced Research Fellowship for "The Changing Maritime Configuration of NATO in the Post-Cold War Period."

Ralph Bunche Fellowship Awards 1991-92

The Ralph Bunche Institute of the United Nations has instituted a fellowship program for minority doctoral students studying international affairs at the Graduate School and University Center of The City University of New York. The Ralph Bunche Fellowship Program was initiated several years ago to honor the memory and to help perpetuate the legacy of Ralph J. Bunche, international statesman, the first black recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize (1950) and former president of the American Political Science Association.

Ralph Bunche Fellows for the 1991-92 academic year are:

Judith A. Duncker, an honors graduate of Rutgers University with an M.A. from Fordham University, in her fourth year as a Ralph Bunche Fellow;

Hollis France-Williams, a graduate of Jersey City State College and an APSA Summer Institute participant (1989), in her second year as a Ralph Bunche Fellow;

Rhonda L. Johnson, a graduate of Clarion University of Pennsylvania with an M.S. in Library Sciences from Clarion, in her second year as a Ralph Bunche Fellow;

S. Ernest Lee, Jr., a 1991 graduate of Lafayette College and a participant in the Lincoln University 1990 Summer Program in Public Policy and International Diplomacy, in his first year as a Ralph Bunche Fellow;

Ronald A. Milon, a graduate of the State University of New York at Brockport with an M.A. in History from SUNY-Buffalo, in his third year as a Ralph Bunche Fellow;

Timothy A. Rainey, a Magna Cum Laude graduate of Morgan State University with an M.A./M.S. from Georgetown University, in his second year as a Ralph Bunche Fellow;

James A. Wallace, a 1991 graduate of Swarthmore College with experience in Kenya with the Experiment in International Living, is in his first year as a Ralph Bunche Fellow.

Social Science Research Council

Following are the names, affiliations, and topics of the political scientists who were offered fellowships or grants by Council committees in the most recent annual competitions for research in the social sciences and humanities.

Doctoral Research Fellowships for Area Studies

Africa

Gretchen M. Bauer, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison, for a study of the negotiating process between the state, two foreign-owned industries, and their respective labor forces in post-colonial Namibia.

Stephen J. Detray, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Washington, for a study of local-level institutional responses to Tanzanian economic reforms.

China

Susan H. Whiting, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, for research in Hong Kong on power and wealth in the Chinese township: the political economy of local entrepreneurship.

Jian Yuan, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University, for research in Hong Kong on private property and socialist economy: development of private enterprise in China.

Eastern Europe

Paula Franklin Lytle, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University. Symbolic construction of power: revolutionary mobilization in Yugoslavia.

Wales R. Mack, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of California, Berkeley. Rolling back the state and bringing the market back in: prices and property rights in Polish agriculture.

Jason McDonald, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of California, Berkeley. Changing identities: elite economists as politicians in postwar Hungary.

Claire A. Rosenson, Advanced graduate student in political science, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Language training, training in methodological skills, and special coursework preparatory to research in comparative political culture.

Andrzej W. Tymowski, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University. East European social movements in the transition period: a historical/sociological analysis of representative movements.

Eastern Europe—Language Training Grants

Lorene Marie Allio, graduate student

People in Political Science

in political science, Emory University, for the study of Polish.

Milena K. Novy, advanced undergraduate student in political science, Yale University, for the study of Czech.

John Paul Richardson, graduate student in political science, University of California, San Diego, for the study of Czech.

Karl W. Ryavec, professor of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, for the study of Slovene.

Japan

Steven Kent Vogel, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of California, Berkeley, for a study of the politics of deregulation in Japan: the cases of telecommunications and financial services.

Latin America and the Caribbean

Debra Rose, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Florida, Gainesville, for research in Mexico on the politics of wildlife conservation.

Russia and the Soviet Union

Josephine Andrews, Department of Government, Harvard University, for training in preparation for dissertation research on the emergence of political pluralism in Russia.

Shari Cohen, Department of Political Science, University of California, Berkeley, for training in preparation for dissertation research on the meaning of rule of law in modern-day Soviet Union.

Robert Darst, Department of Political Science, University of California, Berkeley, for a dissertation on the USSR's reappraisal of international interdependence.

Jane Dawson, Department of Political Science, University of California, Berkeley, for a dissertation on the dynamics and impact of citizen protest in late communist societies.

Philip Goldman, Department of Political Science, University of California, Berkeley, for training in preparation for dissertation research on the changes in Russian state institutions and core-periphery relations.

Joel Hellman, Department of Political Science, Columbia University, for a dissertation on the restructuring of the Soviet banking system and the political dynamics of marketization.

Christopher Nevitt, Department of Political Science, University of California, San Diego, for training in preparation for dissertation research on city politics in Moscow.

Matthew Trail, Department of Political Science, University of California, Berkeley, for a dissertation on Gorbachev and the Communist Party.

Judyth Twigg, Department of Political Science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for a dissertation on the sources of military-technological innovation in the Soviet Union, the United States, and Japan.

Southeast Asia

Patricio Abinales, Ph.D. candidate in government, Cornell University, for research in the Philippines on the relationship between local and national politics on the island of Mindanao.

Mary Callahan, Ph.D. candidate in government, Cornell University, for research in Burma on military politics from 1945-62.

Kim Ninh, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Yale University, for research in Vietnam on intellectual organization in socialist Vietnam.

Western Europe

Lydia Fraile, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for research in Spain and Brazil on unions and regime change: the politics of organized labor in Brazil and Spain in the 1970s and the 1980s.

Sofia Perez, Ph.D. candidate in political science, George Washington University, for research in Spain on states, banks, and the politics of financial liberalization: the case of Spain in comparative perspective.

Simona Piattoni, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for research in Italy on alternative paths to development: the experience of the Italian south in the 1970s and the 1980s.

Advanced Research Grants for Area Studies

Africa

Julius Ihonvbere, associate professor of political science, University of Toronto, for a study on community awareness of and responses to environmental degradation in Koko, Nigeria.

Norma Kriger, associate professor in political science, The Johns Hopkins University, for a study of the demobilization and social and political reintegration of revolutionary war veterans in Namibia and Zimbabwe.

Pearl Robinson, associate professor of political science, Tufts University, for a study of the relationship between structural changes in the economy of Niger and the role of the populace in the polity.

Eastern Europe

A. James McAdams, assistant professor of political science, Princeton University. Inter-German relations of a new type—towards a new Germany.

Latin America and the Caribbean

Frances Hagopian, assistant professor of government and social studies, Harvard University, for research in Chile and Brazil on the redefinition of political party identities in Latin America in the post-authoritarian era.

Near and Middle East

Postdoctoral Awards

Robert Vitalis, visiting assistant professor of politics, Princeton University, for research on the role of U.S. private institutions and public agencies in Saudi state formation in the post-World War II period.

Russia and the Soviet Union

Brendan Kiernan, postdoctoral fellow in political science, University of Washington, for research on the development of the Soviet electoral system.

South Asia

Amrita Basu, associate professor of political science and women's and gender studies, Amherst College, for research in Paris on popular culture, women's collective identities, and social change in India.

Bangladesh Fellowship Program

Subrata Shankar Dhar, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Hawaii, for research in Bangladesh and India on discourses of cultural identity in divided Bengal.

Ali Riaz, Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Hawaii, for research in Bangladesh on the structural relationships and interactions between the state and social classes, and the intervention of the military in politics.

Berlin Program for Advanced German and European Studies

Hope Harrison, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Harvard University, for research in Germany on Soviet foreign policy and the German question, 1953-1958.

Jeffrey Kopstein, visiting assistant professor of government, Dartmouth College, for research in Germany on the politics of economic decline: the role of the SED in economic administration 1971-1989.

Robert Rohrschneider, assistant professor of political science, University of Kentucky, for research in Germany on democracy and elite political values in the united Germany.

Foreign Policy Studies

Larry M. Bartels, associate professor of political science, University of Rochester, for research on the nature and impact on public opinion of levels of defense spending in the United States since 1970.

James A. Der Derian, associate professor of political science, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, for research on the role and impact of policy-making simulations on international relations.

James M. Lindsay, assistant professor of political science, University of Iowa, for research on how the elite American news media cover international news.

Steven L. Livingston, assistant professor of political science, University of Utah, for research on how the end of the Cold War will produce changes in the coverage of international news and reporting on American foreign policy in the United States.

Timothy J. McKeown, associate professor of political science, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, for research on U.S. foreign aid disbursements since 1945.

Lisa L. Martin, assistant professor of political science, University of California, San Diego, for research on the political uses of foreign aid in U.S. foreign policy.

Sharyn L. O'Halloran, postdoctoral lecturer in public policy, Stanford University, for research on alternative models for explaining American trade policy.

John R. Oneal, assistant professor of political science, University of Alabama, for research on domestic and international influences on the President's use of force.

Kathryn A. Sikkink, assistant professor of political science, University of Minnesota, for research on the incorporation of human rights as an integral part of U.S. foreign policy.

Indochina Scholarly Exchange Program

Thaveeporn Vasavakul, Ph.D. candidate in political science at Cornell University, to conduct research on the state of Southeast Asian studies in Vietnam, its research, methodology, and trends.

Brantly Womack, professor of political science, Northern Illinois University, to conduct research on Vietnam and China after the third Indochina war: an assessment of the new parameters of normalized Sino-Vietnamese relations, including national, sub-national and regional dimensions.

International Peace and Security

Dissertation Fellowships

Elizabeth Malory Cousens (United States), Ph.D. candidate in international relations, Stanford University. "Acting in Self Defense: A Moral Argument for the Use of Force by States in Contemporary World Politics," 24 months.

Bhavna Davé (India), Ph.D. candidate in political science, Syracuse University. "Emergence of Nationalist and Separatist Politics in Kazakhstan," 24 months.

Maria Lynn Green (United States), Ph.D. candidate in international relations, American University. "The Politics of Transnational Influence: The Rise of Private Industry and Strategic Alliances in European Community Telecommunications Policy," 24 months.

Alfonso H. Lara (United States), Ph.D. candidate in political science, Stanford University. "Citizenship and Military Service After the Mass Army: Recreating the Citizen-Soldier in France and Germany," 24 months.

Vicki Lynne Norberg-Bohm (United States), Ph.D. candidate in public policy, Harvard University. "International Security, Environment and Development: The Role of Technology Transfer in Promoting Sustainable Energy Systems," 24 months including 9 months of field work.

Miranda Alice Schreurs (United States), Ph.D. candidate in political science, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. "Specialized Knowledge and Global Environmental Policy in Japan, Germany, the Netherlands, and the United States," 24 months.

Postdoctoral Fellowships

Anthony G. Hyman (United Kingdom), historian/political scientist, visiting fellow at the University of Oxford. "Nationalism, National Identity and Islam in the Central Asia Region," 24 months.

Tatiana V. Zimakova (USSR), social policy scholar, USSR Academy of Science, Institute for International Economic and Policy Studies. "Poverty in the USSR and Eastern

People in Political Science

Europe in the Period of Deep Economic Crisis of the 1980s, and the Development of Anti-poverty Politics," 24 months.

International Predissertation Fellowship Program

Ian R. Carter, graduate student in political science, Duke University, to study the political economy of Chile.

Anne Marie Clark, graduate student in political science, University of Minnesota, to study the effects of international activity on human rights violations in Argentina, Chile and Guatemala.

Lisa C. Fischler, graduate student in political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison, to study political culture as a dynamic process at the local level in China.

Jon B. Fullerton, graduate student in government, Harvard University, to study conflict moderating strategies in liberal states in India.

Dennis C. Galvan, graduate student in political science, University of California, Berkeley, to study the workings of the French colonial and Islamic shari'a courts in the Sine-Saloum regions of Senegal.

Deborah L. Harrold, graduate student in political science, University of Chicago, to study Arab forms of representation in government and state structure and their interpretation by the West.

Stephen B. Herschler, graduate student in political science, University of Chicago, to study contemporary bureaucracy in China.

Stephen J. Kay, graduate student in political science, University of California, Los Angeles, to study social movements after transition to democracy in Latin America.

Jeffrey T. Kilpatrick, graduate student in political science, University of Chicago, to study the appropriation of symbols from popular culture by the state in Zimbabwe.

Stephen J. King, graduate student in politics, Princeton University, to study rural development in Tunisia.

Ellen M. Lust, graduate student in political science, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor to study why

Third World nations have failed to experience sustained economic growth and develop efficient state-society relations.

Mona M. Lyne, graduate student in political science, University of California, San Diego, to study the role of international forces in shaping the coalitional bases of support for Brazil's neo-liberal development model.

Eric C. Olson, graduate student in political science, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, to study the political economy of local level Chinese structures and processes and their interaction with international organizations and NGOs.

Diane J. Pansky, graduate student in political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison, to study the role of women in the new indigenous people's movements in the Andes.

Elizabeth J. Remick, graduate student in government, Cornell University, to study the legacies of local state-building in two locales in China.

Janet L. Roitman, graduate student in political science, University of Pennsylvania, to study the politics of informal economies in Africa.

Lauran R. Schultz, graduate student in political science, University of Wisconsin, Madison, to study the normative dimensions of politics in the Philippines.

Shawn M. Wade, graduate student in political science, University of California, Los Angeles, to study political coalition formation and peasant politics in Mexico.

Bridget B. Welsh, graduate student in political science, Columbia University, to study relations between political stability, democratic regimes and state power in the Caribbean.

Research on the Urban Underclass

Undergraduate Research Assistantships

Ronald E. Brown, associate professor of political science, and Laura R. Reese, associate professor of political science, both at Eastern Michigan University, to support research by four undergraduates on the unemployment of African American teenagers in the city of Ypsilanti, Michigan.

Gretchen E. MacLachlan, assistant professor of political science and senior research associate, Southern Center for Studies in Public Policy, Clark Atlanta University, to support research by four undergraduates on an experimental youth employment program in a disadvantaged area near the university.

Dissertation Fellowships

Daniel L. Howard, Ph.D. candidate in public policy, Vanderbilt University, for research on cardiac care and mortality among African-American, Latino, and white men.

Robert C. Smith, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Columbia University, for research that examines the impact of structural factors on labor market outcomes among recent Mexican immigrants.

Thomas G. Stewart, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Harvard University, for research on the effects of incarceration on the political attitudes, beliefs, and behavior of the urban underclass.

Summer Dissertation Workshop Participant

Yvette M. Alex, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Ohio State University, for research on the extent to which political participation on the part of the underclass is enhanced by neighborhood political organizations.

Ventrese K. Stanford, Ph.D. candidate in policy studies, State University of New York, Buffalo, for research on the application of private sector technology to the spread of information about community-based organizations in neighborhoods of concentrated poverty.

Stein Rokkan Prize

The fifth Stein Rokkan Prize in Comparative Social Science Research, created by the International Social Science Council and the Conjunto Universitario Candido Mendes to honor the memory of Stein Rokkan, was attributed jointly to Stefano Bartolini (University of Trieste, Italy) and Peter Mair

(University of Leiden, Netherlands) for their book on Identity, Competition and Electoral Availability: The Stabilization of European Electorates, 1885-1985. Cambridge University Press, Cambridge (UK) 1990.

U.S. Institute of Peace

The following political scientists have been selected as fellows and scholars in the 1991-92 Jennings Randolph Program for International Peace Program.

Peace Fellow

Thomas Imobighe, professor of political science, Bental State University, and commissioner, National Boundary Commission of Nigeria. A specialist in African security issues, Imobighe will explore how regional organizations can play a more effective role in managing conflicts between Third World countries, comparing the Organization for African Unity and the Organization of American States.

Visiting Fellow

Don Peretz, professor of political science, State University of New York at Binghamton, will examine how the establishment of a Palestinian state or other political entities in the West Bank or Gaza would affect the status of Palestinian refugees throughout the Middle East.

Peace Scholars

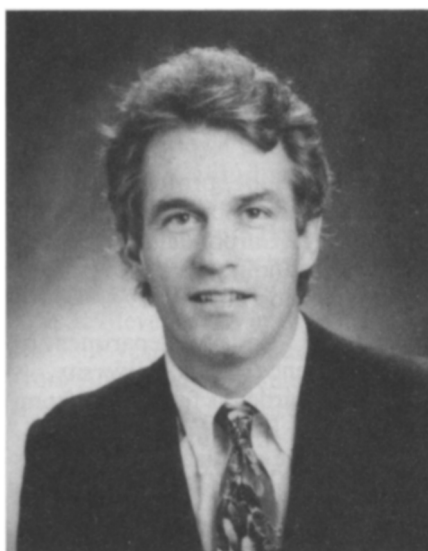

Mohammed Abu Nimer, Ph.D. student, George Mason University. Dissertation topic: Conflict Resolution and Political Change: A Case Study of Intervention Models in Arab-Jewish Relations in Israel.

Jean Boone, Ph.D. student, Georgetown University. Dissertation topic: The USSR in the World Economy: The Politics of Soviet Foreign Economic Reform, 1985-1990.

Cynthia Irvin, Ph.D. student, Duke University. Parties Against the State: Paramilitary Politics in Severely Divided Societies.

Other Awards and Honors

Lee Ann Banaszak, assistant professor of political science at Iowa

Mark Gibney

State University, has been awarded a Bundeskanzler Scholarship from the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation for 1991-92 to conduct research in Berlin.

James W. Button, department of political science, University of Florida, received the 1990 V. O. Key Book Award for Blacks and Social Change: Impact of The Civil Rights Movement in Southern Communities. The V. O. Key Award is for the best book in American politics with a focus on the South and is presented annually by the Southern Political Science Association.

Mark Gibney, associate professor, department of political science, Purdue University, has received the Murphy/Amoco Award for Outstanding Teaching at Purdue University. Last year he received the award for Best Teacher in the School of Liberal Arts.

Martin E. Goldstein, Widener University, has been appointed a William C. Foster Fellow at the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency for the 1991-92 year. He will be working at the Bureau of Non-proliferation Policies.

Frances Hagopian, department of political science, Tufts University, has received a Fulbright-Hays Training Grant and a Howard Heinz Endowment grant to support her research on political parties and representation in Latin America in the post-authoritarian era.

Darrell Hammer, Indiana University, has received a Fulbright Fellowship to help develop a university level political science curriculum in the Soviet Union in fall 1991.

Richard S. Hillman, chair of department of political science, St. John Fisher College, has received a Fulbright award to lecture and conduct research at the Central University of Venezuela in 1992. He received a Fulbright previously in 1986-87.

Roberta Ann Johnson, professor of politics, University of San Francisco, has been awarded a Fulbright Scholarship to teach American politics at the University of Indonesia, January to June, 1992.

Robert S. Jordan, research professor of international institutions, department of political science, University of New Orleans, was named the Vice Admiral Edwin P. Hooper Postdoctoral Fellow in Naval History, U.S. Naval Historical Center, and a Center Research Associate, USAF Historical Research Center.

Joel J. Kassiola, professor and deputy chair, department of political science, Brooklyn College of the City University of New York, was selected to be an American Council on Education Fellow in Higher Education Administration for 1991-92. He will serve his Fellowship at Haverford College.

John F. Kozlowicz was awarded the W. P. Roseman Award for Excellence in Teaching by the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater at the spring, 1991 commencement. The award is $1,000 and is the highest honor available to teaching faculty at the university. Kozlowicz continues to chair the political science department at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater.

Roberta Ann Johnson

Earl R. Kruschke

Earl R. Kruschke, department of political science, California State University, Chico, has been chosen by university trustees as a 1991 Outstanding Professor.

Nancy S. Love, Penn State University, associate professor of political science, received the 1990 Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Award for Distinguished Teaching. This award is given in recognition of outstanding teaching at the university, particularly at the undergraduate level.

Nicholas Lovrich, department of political science, Washington State University, has received the annual Faculty Excellence Award in public service which carries a $2,500 stipend. He is also the principal investigator on a $450,000 Kellogg Foundation Grant related to local governments' financial policy and personal problems.

John D. Martz III, Penn State University, professor of political science, received the 1990 Distinguished Professor Award. The special academic title is intended to recognize outstanding professors, with an exceptional record of research, teaching, and/or creativity and service.

Albert P. Melone, professor of political science, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, is recipient of the Outstanding Teacher Award, College of Liberal Arts, 1990-91.

Anthony M. Messina, department of political science, Tufts University, has been awarded a fellowship from the Friedrich Ebert Foundation to investigate the political consequences of consensus politics in postwar West Germany.

Virginia L. Muller has received the 1991 Lowell Davies Award for outstanding faculty achievement at the University of San Diego, where she serves as chair of the department of political science.

Rosemary O'Leary and Stuart Bretschneider, Maxwell School, Syracuse University, were voted "Professors of the Year, 1990-1991" by the graduate students in the masters of public administration program.

Elinor Ostrom, Indiana University, has been elected a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She has also been appointed as the Arthur F. Bentley Professor of Political Science at Indiana University.

Nicholas Lovrich

Elinor Ostrom

G. Bingham Powell Jr., University of Rochester, has been elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Pearl T. Robinson, department of political science, Tufts University, is the recipient of a Social Science Research Council grant to support her work on "Neotraditional Corporatism and the Changing Culture of Politics in Niger."

Robert Rohrschneider, Indiana University, has a grant from the Social Science Research Council for conducting research in Berlin, Germany, for 1991-92.

Armin Rosencranz, president of the Pacific Energy and Resources Center in Sausalito, has been awarded a Fulbright lectureship at the National Law School of India in Bangalore from January to April 1992 where he will be teaching environmental law.

Steven E. Sanderson, department of political science, University of Florida, will receive a Tinker Foundation Award of $210,000 over a three-year period. This grant supplements major Ford and MacArthur Foundation Awards to the Tropical Conservation and Development Program at the University of Florida. The grant is for the study of natural resources and the environment in Latin America.

Donna E. Shalala, chancellor of the University of Wisconsin, has received an honorary degree from Princeton University.

Frank J. Sorauf has been selected as Regents' Professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis.

Timothy Tilton, professor, Indiana University, has been recognized with a Distinguished Service Award from Indiana University. He is currently the president of the Monroe County, Indiana, Board of Commissioners and the Monroe County Plan Commission.

Carol A. Vitale, a 1991 MPA graduate of Suffolk University, received the first Outstanding Student of Public Administration award from the Massachusetts Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration. The award includes a stipend of $1,000.

Graham H. Walker, department of political science, University of Pennsylvania, has received a $30,000 Research Fellowship by the Evangelical Scholarship Initiative, University of Notre Dame.

Howard J. Wiarda, University of Massachusetts, has been named a visiting fellow at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C., and will be teaching at the National Defense University in Washington. Wiarda has been awarded a Fulbright research award for his project on "U.S. Strategic Policy in the post-Cold War Era."

Sharon Wolchik, director of the Russian and East European Studies Program, The George Washington University, has received a grant of $60,000 from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation to research the role of women in both the "new political and economic order," and policy making in Central and Eastern Europe.

In Memoriam

Stephen S. Goodspeed

Stephen S. Goodspeed, professor of political science emeritus at the University of California, Santa Barbara, died of cardiac arrest during his sleep on February 9, 1991, at the age of 75.

A devoutly loyal alumnus of the University of California, Steve Goodspeed completed his B.A. and Ph.D. degrees at the Berkeley campus, where his father was a distinguished botanist. During World War II Steve served in the U.S. Navy for four years and advanced in rank from Ensign to Lieutenant. In 1946 he was appointed lecturer in political science at the university's recently acquired Santa Barbara campus. After necessarily teaching a variety of courses, he was soon able to concentrate on his major interests in international relations and organization, as well as Latin American governments.

From the start, he was a popular instructor among undergraduates, who appreciated his careful preparation and thoughtful presentations. Many a student was eased through complex materials by Professor Goodspeed's well organized lecture outlines as well as his sense of humor. His genuine interest in the welfare of students extended beyond the classroom setting. He was always willing to give of his time and wisdom to help students with personal concerns and to encourage them to reach for the highest goal.

As an author, Steve Goodspeed published several studies, including a lengthy monograph on the "Role of the Chief Executive in Mexico" (1955). His most notable work was The Nature and Function of International Organization, published by Oxford University Press in 1959, with a second edition appearing in 1967. This book became a major text in the field for a number of years. Steve's writing was characterized by a direct and lucid style, with a clear-cut organization of ideas.

Steve Goodspeed attained the rank of professor in 1960. His dedicated service as advisor to student organizations and as a coordinator of intercollegiate athletics made him a natural choice for the position of vice chancellor for student services, to which he was appointed in 1960. No recital of the ensuing decade could recapture the exhausting and tense years of protests and disorders that particularly frustrated campus administrators such as Goodspeed, reared in an older tradition of civility and rational discourse. Yet he survived the period with an outward equanimity that masked his inner feelings. Indeed, this steady and dispassionate demeanor was his characteristic public image, except as a spectator at basketball games, when he could become as animated and vociferous as any coach.

In 1971, Steve moved to the position of vice chancellor for administrative affairs, a post he held until his retirement in 1978. He had been instrumental in the formation of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and served as its first president. In retirement, he remained active in numerous civic organizations. A few months before his death, he was re-elected as director of the Montecito Water District Board, a visible and politically charged agency in drought-plagued Southern California.

For more than three decades, Stephen Goodspeed was a central figure in the development of UCSB into a major university campus. His many contributions will be remembered by a host of former students and colleagues, as well as community leaders. To give and to serve were his hallmarks. Indeed, it was this human dimension of Steve that transcended his outstanding academic achievements. Many students through the years owe their career opportunities to his careful guidance, assistance, and concern.

Gordon E. Baker
Henry A. Turner
University of California,
Santa Barbara
Robert Casier
Santa Barbara City College