CONTRIBUTORS

PATRICIA CAPLAN is Principal Lecturer in Social Anthropology at Goldsmiths' College, University of London. She has worked extensively among Swahili, principally on Mafia island, Tanzania, but also in Nepal and India. Her interests are mainly in gender studies, on which she has written a great deal. She is also author of Choice and Constraint in a Swahili Community (1975).

FRANÇOIS CONSTANTIN is a political scientist at the Centre de Recherche et d'Étude sur les Pays d'Afrique Orientale (CREPAO), Université de Pau et des Pays de l'Adour, France. He has worked principally on the politics of Islam, including relations between Saudi Arabia and East Africa, in West Africa, and on problems of identity and charisma. Among other works he is the author of Les Communautés Musulmanes d'Afrique Orientale (1983) and has edited Les Voies de l'Islam en Afrique Orientale (1987).

COLLETTE LE COUR GRANDMAISON is a social anthropologist who has worked extensively in Senegal as well as among Omani Arabs in Oman and East Africa. She is a CNRS member of the Laboratoire d'Ethnologie et de Sociologie Comparative, Paris X, Nanterre. Her publications include Femmes Dakaroises (1972) and various others on Islam in both West and East Africa.

FRANÇOISE LE GUENNEC-COPPENS is a member of the CNRS research group, Langues, Cultures et Sociétés de l'Océan Indien (LACITO) in Paris, and has worked on the Swahili of Lamu and, latterly, on the Hadrami diaspora in East Africa and the Comorian islands. She is currently organiser of a new CNRS research group in Paris entitled Sociétés Plurales de l'Est Africain, which she founded. She is the author of Femmes Voilées de Lamu, Kenya (1983) and various articles on Swahili and Hadhrami.

PAUL NUGENT was formerly lecturer in the Department of Politics at Keele University and is now doing postgraduate research on rice farming in Ghana at the School of Oriental and African Studies.

DAVID PARKIN is professor of African anthropology at the School of Oriental and African Studies, London, and has worked on both Muslim and non-Muslim peoples of East Africa. He is the co-editor (with Joan Maw) of Swahili Language and Society (1985) and author and editor of various books and articles on coastal and mainland East African peoples.

ROBERT PEAKE completed his doctoral degree on the basis of research on tourism in Malindi, Kenya. He has continued his association with the School of Oriental and African Studies, London, while also working for an international business firm in London.
