

Figures

---

- |   |                |
|---|----------------|
| 1.1 John Tanton with pen and paper at his desk in Petoskey,Michigan, in 1986  | page 53 |
| 2.1 A map showing the location of the four counties in Marylandthat passed or proposed English-only policies between 2012and 2013: Frederick County, Carroll County, Anne ArundelCounty, and Queen Anne's County; Washington, DC, is markedas a point for reference | 62             |
| 3.1 A map showing Carroll County, which passed an English-onlypolicy; two more linguistically and racially diverse nearby counties,Montgomery County and Howard County; and the two majorcities in the region, Washington, DC, and Baltimore, Maryland                  | 91             |