

ASIAN ART

The Arts of China

Third Edition

by Michael Sullivan

An extensively revised, updated, and reset edition of what the Times Literary Supplement called "the best introduction to the artistic tradition" of China. Sullivan presents a fascinating and balanced picture of Chinese art from the Stone Age to the present day. He concerns himself not only with art, but also with Chinese philosophy, religion, and the realm of ideas. At the same time, he places the arts in their political and social setting. Hence, his book is not merely a history of art but, to some degree, a cultural history of China as well. $32.50 hardcover, $12.50 paperback, 318 illustrations.

Art of Tibet

A Catalogue of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art Collection

by Pratapaditya Pal

"Pal has made a mark for himself by his rare combination of scholarship and energy. . . a major contribution to both the scholarly and the lay understanding of Tibetan art."—Sherman E. Lee
"A work of exceptional scholarly merit. . . the long introduction by Dr. Pal is one of the most urbane and authoritative overviews of the cultural and religious fabric from which Tibetan art arose, that I have read in a long time. . . With Dr. Pal's lucid and magisterial essay, this rich civilization comes one major step closer to a Western reading and viewing audience."—Wayne Begley

A Pictorial History of Chinese Architecture

A Study of the Development of Its Structural System and the Evolution of Its Types

Liang Ssu-ch'eng • edited and with a Foreword by Wilma Fairbank

"At long last Liang Ssu-ch'eng's pioneering research on traditional Chinese architecture is available to Western readers. Without question this book is a major contribution by one of the great Chinese specialists on a subject that still remains relatively unexplored in the West."—Thomas Lawton, Director, Freer Gallery of Art, Smithsonian Institution

"This book provides an invaluable source for the study of ancient Chinese architecture. It covers the early period of the great historic monuments in the North of China. With beautiful drawings and handsome photographs, aided by concise text and scholarly commentary, the book offers an insight into the appreciation of Chinese architecture. . . . It is almost a miracle to have these precious documents brought together after all these tumultuous years. I believe it was Wilma Fairbank's faith and our fate to have Liang Ssu-ch'eng's dream realized."—Chin Pai, University of Michigan

"A gripping study of the woman who aspired to be empress of China."*

This "absorbing biography" (Joseph Kraft), written by one of today's leading authorities on China, captures both the astonishing life and turbulent personality of Jiang Qing—daughter of a concubine, movie star, co-ruler with her husband of one billion people, would-be empress of post-Mao China, and today, defiant prisoner for life.

"Basic for those seeking to understand the inner workings of the Chinese Communist movement."

A Complete Book Concerning HAPPINESS AND BENEVOLENCE

by Huang Liu-hung

translated & edited by Djang Chu

Huang Liu-hung, one of some 1,500 local magistrates in seventeenth-century China, authored this book as a manual for other magistrates and their advisers. Only small portions have ever appeared in translation since it was first published in China in 1699.

By illustrating his interpretation of proper official conduct through events drawn from his own career, Huang establishes a Confucian exemplar for bringing happiness and benevolence to the people. His book offers modern readers insight into everyday life and legal processes during the early Ch'ing period, as well as into the mentality of the ruling elite and its attitude toward the common people.

Competitive Edge

The Semiconductor Industry in the U.S. and Japan

Edited by Daniel I. Okimoto, Takuo Sugano & Franklin B. Weinstein.

During the 1970's, Japan supplanted the United States as the world leader in steel production, automobile manufacturing, and consumer electronics. Are the Japanese poised to repeat these successes in the semiconductor industry? The question has vast significance, because semiconductor technology holds the key to competitiveness in all areas of high technology. This book provides the first in-depth analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of each country's semiconductor industry with reference to technological innovation, the role of government, and the influence of financial institutions. The first book in the series ISIS STUDIES IN INTERNATIONAL POLICY, sponsored by the International Strategic Institute at Stanford. $27.50

Seeds of Destruction

Nationalist China in War and Revolution, 1937-1949

Lloyd E. Eastman. Who lost China? Based on a wide array of hitherto unused documentary sources, including the records and memoirs of the Nationalists themselves, this study concludes that the Nationalists collapsed largely as a result of their own failings. The author delves deeply into the inner workings of the regime, documents its weaknesses, and analyzes such key factors in their ultimate defeat as the relationship between the central and provincial governments, the plight of the tax-burdened peasantry, the intraparty politics of the regime, the deficiencies of the army during the wars against Japan and the Communists, and Chiang Kai-shek's own assessment of his army and the civilian branches of his regime during the final phases of the war. $32.50

Germany and Republican China

William C. Kirby. From 1928 to 1938, China had closer relations with Germany than with any other foreign power. The heart of this remarkable and mutually profitable relationship was a conjunction of interests between a heavily industrialized Germany in search of new export markets and raw materials, and a China committed to rapid industrial growth. Stressing Germany's influence on Nationalist economic, military, and ideological development, this study adds not only to our fragmentary knowledge of Chinese industrial development under Nationalist rule, but contributes to our understanding of Western-Third World relations between the wars. $35.00

The Gospel of Gentility

American Women Missionaries in Turn-of-the-Century China

Jane Hunter

At the turn of the century, women represented over half of the American foreign mission force and had settled in "heathen" China to preach the lessons of Christian domesticity. Using excerpts from diaries, reminiscences, and letters, Hunter describes the backgrounds of these missionaries and the problems and satisfactions they found in China.

"Makes an indispensable contribution to the understanding of what the presence of American women meant to China."

Technology and Agricultural Development in Pre-War Japan

Penelope Francks

The first micro-economic study of the development of Japanese agriculture, this book focuses on the technical and economic change in agriculture that occurred in the Saga Plain in Kyushu from 1850 to 1940. It not only gives a picture of the evolution of rural life in all of pre-war Japan but also provides a Japanese example of the successful resolution of some of the issues of concern to present-day development economists. $30.00

Newspapers in Asia

Contemporary Trends and Problems

edited by John A. Lent

A systematic description of the news publishing services in 24 Asian countries ranging from Afghanistan to Japan. Twenty-one internationally known contributors, including the editor, present the most up-to date and exhaustive survey available on the region's news publishing services.

The individual chapters discuss the structure and function of magazines and newspapers within the region, covering such topics as historical development, control, ownership and pressures, performance, facilities, financing, readership and reporting.

Organized into four major parts, the book begins with an introduction to freedom of the press issues in Asia. Parts Two to Four describe the publishing world of the twenty-four Asian nations arranged for convenience by regions—eight in East Asia, nine in Southeast Asia, and six in South Asia. Each part begins with an introduction to press freedom in the region under study. The book concludes with an extremely comprehensive bibliography.

DREAMS, ILLUSION, AND OTHER REALITIES

Wendy Doniger O'Flaherty

Dreams, myths, illusion: common sense says they can't be real. Yet these other realities hold us with a persuasive force that is inescapable. O'Flaherty explores the essential continuity of the real and unreal through a close examination of Indian myths. These stories, ancient tales that portray dreaming and waking as parts of a single reality, and O'Flaherty's interpretations of them pose a serious challenge to our most deeply rooted assumptions about reality and knowledge.

"... an important contribution to the understanding of Japan-U.S. relations."
—Yoshio Okawara, Japanese Ambassador to the United States

Far-East specialist William Watts illuminates the ways in which Japanese and Americans perceive themselves and each other. Important reading for everyone concerned about the relationship between the two countries. "It is up to date, impartial, understanding, and interpretive based on the figures—and facts—and an excellent book based on the realities." — Mike Mansfield, American Ambassador to Japan and former U.S. Senator

Studies in Classical Chinese Thought

Henry Rosemont, Jr., and Benjamin I. Schwartz, editors

"Contains some of the finest papers on a broad range of topics in classical Chinese thought that I have read and in many ways reflects the progress and the increasing degree of sophistication with which Western scholars are addressing problems in Chinese philosophy. . . . It also sets very high standards of research and analysis for the disciplines involved. . . . It is with considerable anticipation that I look forward to its companion volume."—Roger T. The Buddhist Feminine Ideal: Queen Śrīmālā and the Tathāgatagarbha

Diana Mary Paul

This study is an interpretation of the historical and philosophical development of a late second-century (or early third-century) Buddhist text. The text glorifies the feminine religious ideal in which a woman achieves the highest spiritual path advocated in Mahāyāna Buddhism. A translation and annotation of the primary Chinese version of the text is also included.

Against the State

Politics and Social Protest in Japan

David E. Apter and

Nagayo Sawa

This scrutiny of modern protest politics focuses on the 20-year-long struggle surrounding the building of the New Tokyo (Narita) International Airport. Using field observation, in-depth interviewing, and first-hand experience drawn from living in the "fortresses" surrounding the airport, the authors examine the conflict and violence that ensued. $22.50

"Here at last is a book that enters and illuminates for us the world of ordinary women in contemporary Japan. This is a book that will astonish, amuse, sometimes sadden, and sometimes delight a Western reader confronted with the struggles, the satisfactions, and the fresh perspectives of Japanese women today." –Susan Pharr, University of Wisconsin-Madison

"It is certainly the best and most balanced book about Japanese women that I have read: full of fascinating detail and drawing on biographies from the days when daughters were sold into prostitution right up to the days of the women's movement." –Ronald P. Dore, The Technical Change Centre, London

LEARN JAPANESE

New College Text, Volume 1

John Young and Kimiko Nakajima

$13.95 paper

After fifteen printings, the Learn Japanese: College Text series has been substantially revised. Revisions incorporated into the new series grew out of the authors' decade and more of classroom experience. The most significant improvement is the addition of Culture Notes to help clarify the sociolinguistic context in which the language is used. The new sociolinguistic approach (which encourages the "generation of discourse") is integrated with the original pattern approach (which encourages the "generation of sentences"). Many components of the first edition have been revised or rearranged. The result is a clearer, more natural, and more functional presentation of the Japanese language.
