
list of contributors

Craig N. Cipolla is Associate Curator of North American Archaeology at the Royal Ontario Museum and an Assistant Professor of Anthropology at the University of Toronto. Author of Archaeological theory in the new millennium (2017, co-authored with Oliver Harris), Becoming Brothertown, Foreign objects (2013), and Rethinking colonialism (2015, co-edited with Katherine Hayes), Craig's research interests include archaeological theory, colonialism and collaborative Indigenous archaeologies.

Matt Edgeworth is Senior Project Officer for the Cambridge Archaeological Unit, University of Cambridge, and Honorary Visiting Research Fellow at the University of Leicester. He edited the volume Ethnographies of archaeological practice (2007) and wrote the book Fluid pasts. Archaeology of flow (2011). In a series of recent papers on archaeological theory, he argues that archaeologists can have confidence in their own distinctive evidence base and methodologies in developing theoretical themes, engaging with ideas from external sources on an equal basis, rather than being dependent upon them.

Michael Given is Senior Lecturer in Archaeology at the School of Humanities, University of Glasgow. His research interests include archaeological survey and landscape archaeology, the historical periods in the eastern Mediterranean, and the relationship between people and the environment. Between 2002 and 2012 he was the co-director of the Troodos Archaeological and Environmental Survey Project in Cyprus.

Oliver Harris is Associate Professor of Archaeology at the University of Leicester. His research interests are mainly focused on archaeological theory and the British Neolithic and he co-directs the Ardnamurchan Transitions Project in western Scotland, which investigates long-term human occupation and its relationship with specific moments of change. He is the author, with Craig Cipolla, of Archaeological theory in the new millennium (2017), and, with John Robb and others, of The body in history. Europe from the Palaeolithic to the future (2013).

Gavin Lucas is Professor of Archaeology at the University of Iceland. His main research interests lie in archaeological method and theory and the archaeology of the modern world. His most recent book was Understanding the archaeological record (2012) and he is co-editing a new series of volumes called Archaeological Orientations for Routledge. Recent fieldwork in Iceland includes a project exploring trade during the 17th and 18th centuries.

Assaf Nativ is a postdoctoral fellow at the Martin Buber Society of Fellows in the Humanities and Social Sciences, The Hebrew University, Israel. His interests include the Pottery Neolithic and Chalcolithic periods in the southern Levant, archaeologies of the recent past, and archaeological theory.

Among his publications is Prioritizing death and society. The archaeology of Chalcolithic and contemporary cemeteries in the southern Levant (2014).

Tim Flohr Sørensen is Associate Professor of Contemporary Archaeology and Archaeological Theory at the Saxo Institute, University of Copenhagen. He received his Ph.D. degree from Aarhus University in 2010, and held a postdoctoral position at the University of Cambridge in 2010–12. He was an assistant professor at Aarhus University in 2012–14 before moving to the University of Copenhagen, where he was an assistant professor 2014–17, until being appointed associate professor.

Christopher Witmore is Associate Professor of Archaeology and Classics in the Department of Classics & Modern Languages & Literatures at Texas Tech University. Holding a Ph.D. from Stanford University (2005) and an MA from the University of Sheffield (1998), Chris is fascinated by the character and scope of archaeology. For over a decade he has explored fundamental questions concerning the discipline's objects, practices and rapports with what has become of the past. He is co-author of Archaeology. The discipline of things (2012, with B. Olsen, M. Shanks and T. Webmoor), co-editor of Archaeology in the making (2013, with W. Rathje and M. Shanks), and co-editor of the Routledge Archaeological Orientations series (with G. Lucas). His current projects include Old lands. A chorography of the eastern Peloponnesus, Greece and Teillager 6, Sværholt. The archaeology of a POW camp in Finnmark, Arctic Norway (with B. Olsen and Þ. Pétursdóttir).

Archaeology

Books and Journals from Cambridge University Press

Cambridge publishes books and journals that cover research throughout world archaeology and across all periods.

Our list includes key handbooks and manuals in method, theory and scientific techniques; case studies of sites, surveys and excavations; comparative and interpretative works; scholarship on cultural resource management, and large scale, reliable reference works.

For further details visit:

cambridge.org/core-archaeology

Cambridge
Core

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Guidelines for contributors

Archaeological dialogues is a broad, peer-reviewed journal for debating archaeology. Articles should be accessible to an audience which may be unfamiliar with the specific period and region discussed. Transparent writing is encouraged above abstruse reasoning. Jargon should be avoided and succinct writing is appreciated. We value good illustrations. These can include photographs, line-drawings and maps.

Procedure

The Archaeological dialogues publishing process includes the following steps: submission, evaluation, decision (acceptance, modification or rejection), copy-editing, proof-reading, publication, and distribution. In order to guarantee efficient and quality publication contributors are requested to adhere closely to the following guidelines:

- All manuscripts should be written in English. Manuscripts that seriously fail to conform to the guidelines will be returned to authors for revision before they will be considered.
- When submitting a contribution to Archaeological dialogues, it will be acknowledged on receipt. One of the editors will be the contact person for a paper throughout the entire process. If scope, quality and language are appropriate it will be sent to two anonymous referees for expert opinion. Usually within two or three months, the editors will inform you of their final decision. In the case of rejection, an editorial justification will be provided, including the original referees' reports. In the case of acceptance – which may be conditional on revisions – one of the editors will guide you through the rest of the publishing process. Before an article goes into print, authors will receive a copy of the proofs to check. The entire procedure between submission and appearance should take less than a year.

Types of contributions

Archaeological dialogues publishes two main types of article: 'discussion articles' and 'articles.' The former are accompanied by published comments and a reply. Discussion articles are usually longer, up to 8–9000 words, whereas articles are typically around 4–7000 words. Discussion papers usually take longer to appear in print because of the time required for comments and reply. In addition, the journal publishes 'provocations' and 'reactions'. These are short pieces normally less than 2000 words which take a novel or provocative stance on a particular topic, likely to initiate a lively dialogue, or which respond to an article previously published in Archaeological dialogues. Provocations and Reactions can be more essay-like in style. They are not subject to full peer review but are reviewed by the editorial board. Review essays and interviews are usually solicited by the editorial board, but scholars with suggestions in this direction are encouraged to contact us.

Submission of contributions

Please send manuscripts via email to <dialogues@cambridge.org>.

Authors are solely responsible not only for the contents of their manuscripts, but also for securing any legal rights or permissions to publish submitted material, including copyright-protected materials. The appropriate acknowledgements should be given in captions, endnotes, or elsewhere. Manuscripts should not be submitted to (nor should they have been published in) any other journal or publication.

See <http://uk.cambridge.org/journals/ard> for an extended version of the guidelines for contributors.

This journal issue has been printed on FSC-certified paper and cover board. FSC is an independent, non-governmental, not-for-profit organization established to promote the responsible management of the world's forests. Please see www.fsc.org for information.

Archaeological Dialogues is indexed in the Thomson Reuters Arts and Humanities Citation Index.

Printed in the UK by Bell & Bain.

Archaeological dialogues

discussion article

- 1 On the object of archaeology
Assaf Nativ
- 21 The unburied. On archaeological objects and objectives
Gavin Lucas
- 25 Further notes on the archaeological object Matt Edgeworth
- 28 For the objects, archaeology and the archaeological Christopher Witmore
- 34 Archaeology is process Oliver Harris
- 38 Parts, wholes, objects and processes. A response Assaf Nativ articles

- 49 Earth flows and lively stone. What differences does 'vibrant' matter make? Craig N. Cipolla
- 71 The precarious conviviality of watermills Michael Given

reaction

- 95 Agency (again). A response to Lindstrøm and Ribeiro *Tim Flohr
Sørensen*
- 103 List of contributors

Cambridge Core

For further information about this journal please go to the journal website at:
cambridge.org/ard

MIX Paper from responsible sources
FSC® C007785

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS