FACULTY JURISDICTION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

G. H. Newsom, QC

"Required reading... a most successful attempt to make knowledge of the system and how it works."

The Archbishop of Canterbury in the Foreword

"... this volume will surely become a standard textbook" Church Times

Members of diocesan registries, advisory committees and parish organisations will find this essential source of reference an invaluable, practical guide in the conduct of their business. For those planners and developers who have dealings with church property there can be no more thorough coverage of the law and practice of faculty jurisdiction than this invaluable work.

Consecration as a church or churchyard brings land, buildings and chattels within the faculty jurisdiction of the consistory courts of one of the 43 dioceses in England and Wales.

Faculty Jurisdiction of the Church of England provides the definitive account of the law and practice of faculty jurisdiction, which hitherto has had to be gleaned from scattered references in general ecclesiastical law books.

The Definitive Text

- ★ Deals authoritatively with the structure and working of the court
- ★ Discusses all the reported case law since 1950
- ★ Examines in detail the important changes introduced by the Faculty Jurisdiction (Amendment) Rules 1987
- ★ Sets out the rules in the appendices along with essential forms and precedents

The Author

G. H. Newsom draws on his experience as a Diocesan Chancellor and Chairman of the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules Committee, which drafted the amending rules, to provide a detailed guide to the law.
