In this issue, Selmes et al (pp. 221–225) use an in-patient survey method to assess deprivation of liberty, while Shah & Heginbotham (pp. 243–245) and Cairns et al (pp. 246–247) discuss the recently introduced deprivation of liberty safeguards (DOLS). In a related editorial, Giles Newton-Howes (pp. 217–220) considers the concept of coercion in psychiatry.
