Government and Opposition is one of the world's leading global comparative politics journals. This means that we publish papers dealing with any part of the world, and on any theme, to do with comparative politics, liberally defined. We accept papers that cover a single case, so long as they are positioned within the comparative politics literature and seek to advance comparative political analysis. We are tied to no substantive position, nor to any methodological orthodoxy beyond the fundamental principle of intellectual rigour. To ensure rigour we practise blind refereeing. We publish four issues a year. We also publish substantial review articles, many of which are commissioned, and some of which are the result of proposals made to our review editor.

Submissions

Government and Opposition has a tradition of publishing in a style accessible to any interested reader, and we encourage authors to write in a style as clear and simple as the subject matter allows.

Articles should include a word count: in general the length of articles, including references and notes, should be limited to 8,000 words, but we would consider longer articles of up to 10,000 words where the comparative focus of the submission moves beyond a single country case. Articles should be made anonymous, with all self-identifying mentions removed (including in the file name) to enable the blind-reviewing process. Articles should be accompanied by an abstract of around 150 words and between four and six keywords. We also give authors the opportunity to submit datasets along with their work should they wish. Datasets will not be subject to peer review and will be hosted on the publisher's platform alongside the article.

All articles must be submitted in accordance with the journal's style guide (available from journals.cambridge.org/gov). The journal cannot consider any article that is also under consideration by another journal.

Articles should be submitted online at <http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/gov-opp>. Full instructions and support are available on the site and a user ID and password can be obtained on the first visit. If you require assistance then click the 'Get Help Now' link which appears at the top of every ScholarOne Manuscripts page. If you cannot submit online, please contact the editorial assistant, Jessica Cuthbert-Smith, at Jessica@gvt-and-opp.com
