

Dan D. Nimmo, University of Tennessee, Knoxville, is Distinguished Visiting Professor at Ohio State University for the fall quarter, 1983.

Vincent Ostrom, professor, Indiana University, was a visiting professor at the University of Bielefeld, Germany, during the summer of 1983.

Jeremy T. Paltiel, visiting assistant professor, University of Arizona, 1983-84.

Peter T. Paluch, visiting instructor, Oakland University.

Lyn Ragsdale, assistant professor, University of Arizona, was visiting assistant professor, Department of Political Science, University of Iowa, summer 1983.

Leroy N. Rieselbach, professor, Indiana University, will be a visiting professor at the University of Hamburg, West Germany, in 1983-84.

Jean Robinson, assistant professor, Indiana University, is a visiting scholar at the Hoover Institution, Stanford University, 1983-84.

James Simmons, visiting assistant professor, Indiana University.

Theresa C. Smith, visiting assistant professor, Indiana University.

Carlyle Thayer, visiting fellow, Yale University (June-November 1983) and then visiting scholar, The Center for International Affairs, Harvard University (December 1983-January 1984).

Ilter Turan, professor, University of Istanbul, is visiting professor, Department of Political Science, University of Iowa.

Richard J. Weissman, reappointed visiting assistant professor, Oakland University.

Wayne B. Wheeler, visiting assistant professor, Marquette University.

Alexander Yanov, visiting associate professor, The University of Michigan; formerly of University of California at Berkeley.

Katsumi Yorimoto, Japan Iron and Steel Federation, will be visiting research professor at the University of Pittsburgh.

Award Recipients

American Council of Learned Societies

The American Council of Learned Societies has awarded fellowships or grants under seven programs to 248 scholars. Following is a list of the political science recipients, their affiliations, and their research projects:

Harriet Applewhite, professor of political science, Southern Connecticut State College: Women's political participation in revolutionary Paris, 1789-1795 (in collaboration with Darline Gay Levy).

Charles R. Beitz, associate professor of political science, Swarthmore College: The meaning and basis of political equality.

Jack Bielasiak, associate professor of political science, Indiana University: Crises and crisis-management in the Socialist bloc.

Fred I. Greenstein, professor of politics, Princeton University: The missile gap of 1957-1961: a study of misperception and its consequences.

Andrew C. Janos, professor of political science, University of California at Berkeley: Eastern Europe in the modern world.

David Johnston, assistant professor of political science, Yale University: The concept of the self in modern political theory.

Ronald F. King, assistant professor of government, Cornell University: Democracy, equality, and growth in Keynesian America.

David S. Mason, assistant professor of political science, Butler University: Political change and public opinion in Poland, 1980-1982.

Lester S. Ross, assistant professor of political science, Purdue University: The policy process and the environment in China.

Michael Sandel, assistant professor of government, Harvard University: The predicament of liberal democracy in America.

Lawrence R. Sullivan, associate professor of political science, Adelphi University: Political reforms in the Chinese Communist Party from December 1978 to September 1982.

Jeffrey Tulis, assistant professor of politics, Princeton University: The rhetorical Presidency.

Lynn T. White, associate professor of politics and East Asian studies and director of the Woodrow Wilson School undergraduate program, Princeton University: Persistence and change in urban communities during China's revolution.

British Politics Group's Samuel H. Beer Dissertation Prize

The British Politics Group's Samuel H. Beer Dissertation Prize for 1983 was awarded to two of the nominees because the prize committee was so impressed with the splendid quality of these studies that it was unwilling to choose between the two top ones. Sharing the prize are Gary Walter Cox of the University of Texas, Austin, for "Party and Constituency in Victorian England," written under the direction of Bruce Cain at California Institute of Technology; and Peter A. Hall of Harvard University for "The Political Dimensions of Economic Management," written under the direction of Hugh Heclo at Harvard.

This prize is intended to stimulate interest in the study of British politics among graduate students, thereby helping to develop a new generation of scholars in the British field. The prize is awarded each year to the dissertation making the most outstanding contribution to the understanding of British politics, whether that understanding derives from exclusively British research or from a comparative study. The monetary value of the award is £125. The prize committee was chaired by Nelson W. Polsby. The other members were James Alt and Samuel C. Patterson.

Editor's Note: For information on next year's Beer Dissertation Prize see the announcement in the News of the Profession section in this issue.

Chester I. Barnard Award

David K. Hart and William G. Scott of the University of Washington have won the Chester I. Barnard Award for the outstanding article in volume six of the Southern Review of Public Administration. Their article is titled, "The Philosophy of American Management."

Serving on the Barnard Award Committee were: Robert K. Whelan, University of New Orleans, Chair; G. David Garson, North Carolina State University; Steven K. Hays, University of South Carolina; Jamil Jreisat, University of South Florida; William Earle Klay, Florida State University; Thomas P. Lauth, University of Georgia; Vicky Quigley, University of Louisville; Mitchell F. Rice, Southwest Texas State University; and David Sink, University of Alabama in Birmingham.

Conference Group on German Politics

A selection committee of members of the Conference Group on German Politics has nominated the following interns for work-study programs in the West German Parliament (Bundestag) and in the Information Office (Informationszentrum) of West Berlin.

These Internship Programs are highly selective undertakings to aid the development of young persons with interest in German affairs and American-German relations. Interns spend two to three months in the offices concerned, contributing to the work of the offices and observing their operation. All candidates must be fluent in German, must show evidence of outstanding academic work, and of capability to benefit from work-study programs. Candidates are paid by the offices concerned or by the German Academic Exchange Service (GAES); in addition, travel subsidies are supplied by the GAES.

Deutscher Bundestag, Bonn. The following candidates have been nominated for three months of work-study experience in various Bundestag offices:

John Rosin, School of Advanced International Studies, The Johns Hopkins University.

Millicent Schwenk, School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University.

Brenda Watson, School of Advanced International Studies, The Johns Hopkins University.

Informationszentrum Berlin. The following candidates have been nominated for two months of work-study in the Informationszentrum, Berlin.

Margaret Cranston, California State University, Long Beach.

Gregory Sanders, Oberlin.

Heidi von Zweck, Stanford University.

Council for European Studies Pre-Dissertation Fellowships

The selection committee for the Council for European Studies Pre-Dissertation Fellowship announces the following awards to political scientists in the 1982-83 competition:

William J. Drake, political science, Columbia University; "Telematics Industrial Policies for the 'Informatisation' of Western Europe: Competition and Collaboration in the World Political Economy."

Michael Spourdalakis, political science, Carleton University; "Political Economy of the Panhellenic Socialist Movement."

Kathleen A. Thelan, political science, University of California, Berkeley; "Workers and Technology: West German Trade Unions in Transition." (Honorary)

Council on Foreign Relations International Affairs Fellowships

The Council on Foreign Relations, supported by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, The National Endowment for the Humanities, The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, the Ford Foundation and the Rockefeller Brothers Fund announced the following political scientists as International Affairs Fellows for 1983-84.

Robert J. Einhorn, foreign affairs officer, Strategic Affairs Bureau, United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency; "Pursuing Arms Control with the Soviets."

Elliot J. Feldman, assistant professor of politics at Brandeis and director of the University Consortium for Research on North America; "Ideological and Strategic Forces Affecting Military Conscription in Comparative Perspective."

Stephen J. Flanagan, professional staff member of the United States Senate Select Committee on Intelligence; "The Politics of Conventional Deterrence in Europe: Domestic Factors Influencing NATO Force Planning in the 1980s."

Earl Howard Fry, associate professor of political science and coordinator of Canadian studies at Brigham Young University; "The Search for a Foreign and Domestic Policy Consensus on the Issue of International Direct Investment."

Robert F. Gorman, assistant professor of political science and director of international studies at Southwest Texas State University; "United States Refugee Relief and Development Policy: Linkages with Intergovernmental and Private Voluntary Organizations."

Miles Edwin Kahler, associate professor of political science at Yale University, "Dealing with the Newly-Industrializing Countries: A Comparison of National Policies."

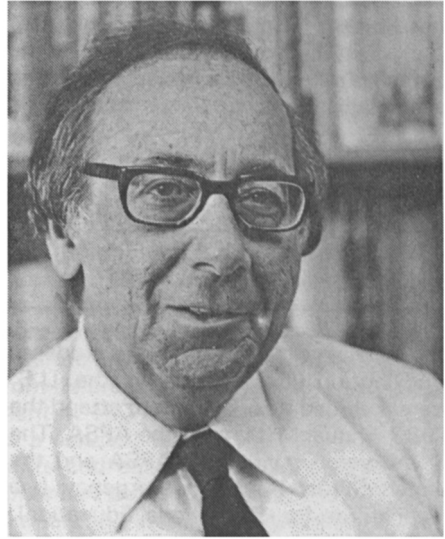

Terry Lynn Karl, assistant professor of government and research associate at the Center for International Affairs of Harvard University; "The Impact of Oil Booms Upon Oil-Producing Nations: The Cases of Venezuela and Mexico."

John S. Odell, associate professor of international relations at the University of Southern California; "International and Domestic Negotiations on Economic Issues."

James Piscatori, Research Fellow of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, Chatham House, London: "Shi'i Political Movements."

Steven Edward Sanderson, Latin American Program Fellow at the Smithsonian Institution's Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars (on leave from the University of Florida); "U.S. Agricultural-Food Policy and the Development of the Greater Caribbean."

Steven R. Strum, assistant professor of political science at the United States Air Force Academy; "The Underlying Assumptions and the Programmatic and Diplomatic Implications of Preparing for Protracted Nuclear War."

Alexander L. George of Stanford University has been named a MacArthur Prize Fellow. He plans to share his prize with collaborator Juliette L. George.

MacArthur Prize Fellows

The following two political scientists are new MacArthur Prize fellows named by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, with their ages, their institutional affiliations, their fields of endeavor, and the five-year totals of their awards, which are based on age.

Seweryn Bialer, 56, professor of political science, Columbia University; studies of Soviet and Polish politics: $268,000.

Alexander George, 63, professor of political science, Stanford University; American-Soviet relations: $295,200.

Seweryn Bialer of Columbia University is one of the two political scientists to win a MacArthur Prize this year. Photo by Joe Pineiro.

National Research Council Postdoctoral Fellow

Lenneal Henderson has been selected a National Research Council Postdoctoral Fellow at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, D.C. for the 1983-84 year. He also conducted an energy management lecture tour in Bombay, Calcutta, Lucknow, Kanpur, New Delhi and Madras in the summer 1983 under the auspices of the U.S. Information Agency.

APSA Annual Meeting Travel Grant Awards

The following foreign graduate students studying political science in the U.S. were awarded travel grants to attend the 1983 Annual Meeting of the APSA. The funds were provided by APSA and the United States Information Agency (via the Institute for International Education).

Zehra F. Arat, Turkey, State University of New York at Binghamton.

Festus Brotherson, Jr., Guyana, University of California, Los Angeles.

Benjamin In-Ning Chang, Republic of China, University of Oregon.

Tun-Jen Cheng, Republic of China, University of California, Berkeley.

Termsak Chalermphanupap, Republic of China, University of New Orleans.

Huang Chi, Republic of China, Indiana University.

Sung Ho Chung, Korea, University of Delaware.

Solo J. Dowuona-Hammond, Ghana, New York University.

Khondaker Ekramul Haque, Bangladesh, University of Pittsburgh.

Tahir Iqbal, Great Britain, University of Pittsburgh.

Jeong-Woo Kil, Korea, Yale University.

Ian Trevor King, Great Britain, University of Minnesota.

Norma Kriger, South Africa, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Azzedine Layachi, Algeria, New York University.

Chang Lee, Korea, University of Michigan.

Ilija Luciak, Austria, University of Iowa.

Calum Awasdair MacDonald, Great Britain, University of California, Los Angeles.

Anand P. Mavalankar, India, University of California, Los Angeles.

Reuben Miller, Israel, University of Denver.

Supachoke Pibulniyom, Republic of China, University of Mississippi.

Saeed Shafqat, Pakistan, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

Peter John Shearman, Great Britain, Kansas University.

Graham W. Sibery, Great Britain, University of South Carolina.

Ming-Deh Yeh, Republic of China, University of Pittsburgh.

Other Awards and Honors

Max Azicri, professor of political science at Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, received a 1983 Exceptional Academic Service Award by the Pennsylvania Department of Education Distinguished Faculty Award Committee. This award was in recognition of his academic contribution to the field of Cuban studies.

Edward G. Carmines, associate professor of political science, Indiana University, John McIver, Ph.D. candidate in political science, Indiana University, and James A. Stimson, professor of political science, University of Houston, were awarded the Pi Sigma Alpha prize for the best paper given at the 1982 Annual Meeting of the Midwest Political Science Association. The title of their paper was "Unrealized Partisanship: Issue Conflict and the Dealignment of the American Electorate."

Richard C. Cortner, professor of political science at the University of Arizona, received notification that his book, The Supreme Court and the Second Bill of Rights: The Fourteenth Amendment and the Nationalization of Civil Liberties (University of Wisconsin Press, 1981) was selected by Choice Magazine, the main reference source for academic librarians, as one of the "outstanding books in Political Science" in 1981.

Donald L. Horowitz, professor of political science, public policy studies and law at Duke University, has been awarded a fellowship at the National Humanities Center.

Donald F. Kettl, assistant professor of government and foreign affairs, University of Virginia, and Gunnar Wikstrom, Jr., professor of political science, Buena Vista College, Iowa, are recipients of substantial research awards under the Hoover Presidential Fellowship and Grant program.

Armin Rosencranz, executive director of the Pioneer Fund, has been awarded a Fulbright fellowship in India.

Mitchell Seligson, associate professor of political science at the University of Arizona, was awarded, along with his co-author John A. Booth, the Pi Sigma Alpha "Best Paper Award" for the best paper presented at the Southwestern Social Science Association Meeting, San Antonio, Texas, March 17-21, 1982. The paper was titled "The Illusion of Authoritarian Values, Democratic Norms, and Political Structures in Mexico."

Before joining the University of Richmond faculty in 1946, he taught at the University of Wisconsin, the University of Washington, Reed College, Baylor University, and Texas Technological College. He also taught for brief periods after coming to the University of Richmond at the University of South Dakota and Emory University.

During his 25 years at the University of Richmond, he served as the chairman of the history and political science department and also as the first chairman of the separate political science department from its creation in 1969 until his retirement in 1971. He distinguished himself as a scholar, teacher and friend to students and colleagues. He authored The American Ballot and several articles for journals and various encyclopedias.

His greatest legacy is the influence he had not only on the political scientists that have followed him at the University of Richmond but also on the many students who studied under him here. They established a Book Award in his honor during his last year of teaching to be granted each year to the outstanding political science graduate. He was a gentle man with strong, humanitarian convictions and a genuine concern for students.

Thomas R. Morris
University of Richmond

In Memoriam

Spencer D. Albright, Jr.

Spencer D. Albright, Jr., professor emeritus of political science at the University of Richmond, died June 18, 1983, at the age of 82 in Richmond, Virginia. He was a member of the University of Richmond faculty from 1946 until his retirement in 1971.

Born in Nashville, Tennessee, and raised in Fayetteville, Arkansas, he earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Arkansas, a master's degree from the University of Chicago, and a doctorate from the University of Texas. He served as an infantryman in World War I and as an air force captain in World War II.

John P. Bradley

John Pickering Bradley, associate professor at North Texas State University, died August 10, 1983. He was 56. A native and, until his final illness, a summer resident of Maine, John Bradley came to Texas from service as a federal civil servant in the 1950s and a Ph.D. at the University of Washington in 1962. His experience and scholarly training made him a keen student of the policy process in Congress and federal agencies. He was known by his colleagues for his painstaking and thorough research in the documentary jungle produced by Congress and its oversight committees: rarely could one visit the government documents section of the library without en-