THE PUBLIC CAREER OF SIR JULIUS CAESAR
1580-1636

L. M. Hill

The most prominent civil lawyer of his time, Sir Julius Caesar is an exemplar of the new kind of officer of state that emerged in the late Elizabethan and early Jacobean periods: a transitional figure in the crown's service who was not fully a bureaucrat, but who nonetheless acted with considerable independence from the crown. This first full-scale analysis of Caesar's long and ambitious career casts new light on the important relationship between administrative and judicial office during the period. $37.50

Peter Penner

Robert Needham Cust
1821-1909

A Personal Biography

This work provides an in-depth characterization of one family that both benefitted and suffered from the British-Indian connection. Cust's career is not only instructive of British-Indian life, it is also reflective of the Weltanmschauung of the aristocratic and conservative class from which he came. The author presents an individual who combined his life-long political involvement in the administration of the British empire with ongoing concerns with missiology and philology. The volume makes a salutary contribution to Victorian biography and to intellectual history. Includes photographs, illustrations, bibliography, and index.

William Lord Herbert of Pembroke
(c. 1507-1570)

Politique and Patriot

This work is a political biography of a Tudor courtier-councillor, William Herbert, which reveals a different portrait of the man than earlier antiquarian accounts. The author posits that Sir William was a politique and a successful politician who was mindful as much of his personal interests as those of his country. This is an entirely new verdict on this Tudor statesman.
