From the Vatican Apostolic Archives, covering the second and final tranche of the Lateran Registers for the pontificate of Leo X (1513–1521), this volume brings to light a great deal of biographical and topographical information illustrating the ecclesiastical landscape of the British and Irish islands. It includes provisions to a number of bishoprics and archbishoprics including Ardee, Ardagh, Armagh, Carlisle, Derry and Worcester; and to monasteries including Canon Island, Dryburgh, Kelso and Scone. Large numbers of obscure parochial clergy, rectors, vicars and chaplains are also mentioned. These are the working documents of the Church about the time of the publication of Luther's 95 Theses. This book is an essential companion to Vol. XX in the series.

ABOUT THE SERIES

For Britain and Ireland in the late medieval and pre-reformation period, the registers of Papal Letters in the Vatican Archives constitute a major source of information for historical research.

In the case of England, they complement the series of episcopal registers preserved for many dioceses from the late 13th century onwards and in addition contain much business of highly political and ecclesiastical import. In the case of Scotland, Wales and Ireland they are the single most important source of ecclesiastical reference for the period.
